WELLESLEY WOMAN KILLED

Babson Institute Official's Wife Near Death as Maid Dies in Auto Crash

Anna Peterson, fifty years old, a maid in the employ of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Huntington of Wellesley Hills, was instantly killed and Mrs. Huntington was seriously injured today when the automobile in which they were riding skidded at Washington street, near Wellesley square, and crashed over the roadway into a field.

Mr. Huntington, an official of the Roger Babson Institute, who was driving the machine, and his nine-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, escaped injury.

The Huntingtons were returning to their home at No. 500 Worcester street, Wellesley Hills, from Duxbury. Mr. Huntington and his daughter were riding together in the front seat and Mrs. Huntington and the maid were in the rear seat.

At Washington and Brook streets there is a dangerous curve and in attempting to negotiate it the car skidded.

The machine ploughed across the sidewalk into a field. Miss Peterson jumped out. Her head struck a tree and she was killed instantly. Mrs. Huntington was thrown from the car and landed on her head.

She was rushed at once to the Newton hospital where it is stated that her condition is critical.

ARREST 124, 16 WOMEN, AS PICKETS

Crowds at Courthouse in Turmoil and 8 Are Taken in; 2 Fined in Test Cases

Brockton, July 9.—The clash between shoe strikers and police with an all-day disturbance which brought excitement into the heart of the city on the strikers' right to picket, ended in a truce late today when police stopped making arrests after 124 pickets, including sixteen women, had been escorted into court.

Two of the leaders in a test case appealed fines of $10 each for loitering.

While they were being arraigned in the district court a riot was staged on the court house steps which ended only when police reserves made eight arrests and drove strikers into the street.

More than five thousand spectators stopped business long enough to witness the clash, crowding streets for a block in either direction. There were hisses and cat calls for the police and cheers for the strikers.

Joseph Lacouture, president of the Brockton District Shoe Workers' Union and Patrick McCullough agreed to accept fines before Judge Herbert C. Thorndike in order to take the case to a higher court.

WHOLESALE ARRESTS

The wholesale arrests followed a ruling of City Solicitor James E. Handrahan that picketing in the present strike is illegal.

The strikers patrolling the outside of the shoe factories of the Diamond Shoe Company, at Sparks and Lincoln streets, defied the police to enforce the ruling. The arrests of 116 of their pickets followed.

Eight more arrested on the Court House steps were arraigned late today. They were charged with causing a disturbance. The cases of 114 were continued until Wednesday with the understanding that they

MRS. BUZZI MUST DIE IN CHAIR FOR MURDER

New York, July 9.—Mrs. Anna Buzzi today was sentenced to die in the electric chair for the murder of Frederick Schneider, Bronx contractor, with whom she lived for eight years.

She was sentenced to go to the chair the week of August 19.

Schneider was found dead in his automobile on a road near Clason Point February 26.

Mrs. Buzzi accepted her sentence with the same stoicism that marked her demeanor throughout the trial. Asked if she had anything to say, she said:

"I have been convicted of a crime I know nothing about. I have been convicted on false and perjured testimony. The greatest sin I ever committed was to live with Fred Schneider, and I trust in God to bring me back and prove to the world that I am innocent."

He pleaded not guilty in court and was released in $500 bail for a hearing on September 10.

Stonemetz's offices are at No. 15 State street. He lives at No. 19 Hamilton road, Brookline. He is forty-three years old.

RAZOR STRIKE CALLED OFF; 400 WIN PAY INCREASE

The company granted a wage increase of four cents an hour to the women employes and six cents an hour to the men, and agreed not to show any discrimination or interfere with the affiliating of the workers with the machinists' union.

Announcement of the settlement was made by the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation and terms of the agreement were made public by Vice-President Connolly of the machinists' organization.

126 GIRLS SENT FROM BOSTON

Pickets Greet Their Arrival in Autos With Boohs and Jeers

Lawrence, July 9.—Determined to defeat the Lawrence phone strike in short order, the telephone company is procuring strike-breakers, male and female, in large numbers. Although the entire local force of girls is but 128 in normal times, the company, it was learned today, sent 126 Boston operators to supplement the 28 already at work on the switchboards.

A wire from Julia S. O'Connor notified the girls that automobiles carrying strike-breakers left Boston about 9 o'clock. One hundred operators were sent from Main exchange, ten from Haymarket, two from Congress and six from Back Bay exchanges, it is reported.

A heavy guard of police was stationed outside the Lawrence phone building. Jeering and booing by the picket line greeted the loads of strike-breakers as they alighted to enter the building.

Shawsheen Village will be the headquarters of the strike-breakers. A former town building, it is under-

SOUGHT TO WED IN MAINE

Went Away With Salesman and Was Foiled by "Five Days' Notice"

Leslie Tolman, nineteen-year-old daughter of Dr. Henry Tolman, Jr., of Salem, missing since last Friday, has been found.

The girl, for whom a search has been in progress all over the State, is being held by the police at Fitchburg, to which city she eloped with a man named Jacob Bull, a salesman, who formerly lived in Quincy.

According to the Fitchburg police, she said she and Bull went to Maine to get married but found when they arrived that five days' notice of intention is required in that State.

She then left for Fitchburg to work there until the expiration of the five-day period, planning to rejoin Bull then and get married.

SUGAR DROPS TO 8.75 IN NEW YORK

New York, July 9.—Another slash was made in the price of refined sugar in the local market today which caused refined granulated to drop as low as 8.75 by one refiner, or 1½ cents below the high price of the season and ½ cent below last week's close. The drop was due to reoffering of 2,100 tons of refined sugar which had been shipped abroad, but was returned because no foreign market could be found.

E. BOSTON TUBE BLOCKED HOURS BY BROKEN RAIL

Thousands of persons were delayed getting to work today and a serious traffic tie-up was caused when a rail broke in the East Boston tunnel between Atlantic avenue station and Maverick Square.

Lines of cars were held up temporarily and then forced to slower movement through the passage for more than two hours. No East Bound cars were run between 7:38 and 8:57.

LURED BY ROMANY LIFE.

Infatuated with the Romany life, she wrote innumerable letters to members of the camp, asking them to let her join them.

And a few days ago, Valentine, the sage, the simpleton, the irresponsible of the camp, came and confided to the crone who rules the camp that he was about to be married.

The old lady is Mrs. Thomas Stanley. She denies indignantly that the camp is a gypsy camp.

"Call us anything you wish, but not gypsies," she says. "We're Americans for four generations. We come down here every Spring and live in tents because that's the only way we can afford a Summer home. We weave baskets and put on colorful garments to attract customers. It's been rather paying. That's why people have taken us for gypsies."

TROUBLES OF HER OWN.

It developed that Mrs. Stanley, who in the Winter lives in Somerville, with her numerous family, has troubles of her own. Her grandson, Thomas Young, his wife Georgia, and their two children, in addition to Valentine Stanley, are missing. They have gone away in one of the two flivver trucks the camp boasts.

Here is the story told to this newspaper by Mrs. Stanley:

"I don't know where the Tolman girl is. I don't know where Tom and Georgia and the kids are. They're gone, that's all I know.

MET TWO YEARS AGO.

"We first met the Tolman girl two years ago, near Duxbury. We were peddling baskets. I was with Georgia at the time. The girl was only seventeen years old—a sweet slip of a thing, and she came up to us. Georgia asked her to buy a basket. Leslie asked us if we were gypsies. Georgia said 'Sure we're gypsies,' she wanted to make a sale, you understand.

"Leslie asked us whether she could come along with us on one of our trips to the cape, for a couple of weeks. I told her it would be impossible. Then we got the surprise of our lives.

"The reason I want to come with you," the girl said, "is because I'm a gypsy myself. Nobody knows it, but it's so. My father and mother were pure-blooded gypsies. Dr. Tolman is not really my father. The Tolmans adopted me when I was a baby, after my parents died. But I found out about it, and I know that I'm a gypsy. I love the gypsy life, and I like to weave baskets and roam about the country. It's in my blood and the time has come for me to answer the call of the Romany clan."

RECEIVES LETTER.

"She talked like a little ninny. We didn't want to get into trouble. We told her she couldn't come. But we sold her a basket.

"After we got back to camp we didn't hear any more from Leslie for a while. But soon she wrote us a letter, begging us to take her along. We got three letters from her, but destroyed them all without answering them.

"The following Spring it was the same. We had no sooner struck camp when we got another letter from Leslie. She wanted us to take her along. We didn't answer the letter."

STORY BORN OUT.

Up to this point the story of the old lady has been borne out. It has been admitted by Dr. Tolman, the girl's father, that she was gypsy-struck. Wherever she saw gypsies she followed them, studied their habits, and got so she could weave baskets as expertly as any of them.

At home she would dress up in the habiliments of gypsies, with the red head dress and highly colored gowns. She made it a practice to get loaded so that she might pass for a gypsy. She read fortune books and became adept in all the arts of the dark-skinned nomads.

Mrs. Stanley says that on Friday night Valentine Stanley and her grandson, Thomas Young, drove to Duxbury in the flivver truck, which is painted a bright yellow and is unmistakable in the matter of identification.

Leslie was seen talking to Valentine and Thomas on Friday. That was the night she disappeared. Her aunt, Mrs. Lord, relates:

SEEN WITH TWO MEN.

"Leslie came out of the house with a bundle wrapped up in a red Indian blanket. She said there were a couple of gypsies outside and she wanted to sell them the blanket. We knew her penchant for everything gypsy and didn't pay any particular attention to her.

"She left the house, and a few minutes later two of her cousins left on their way to the penoffice. They saw her talking to the two men in the yellow truck.

"The description of the two men tallies exactly with that of Valentine Stanley and Thomas Young.

"Thomas is about 25 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs about 120 pounds. He is of medium complexion and doesn't particularly resemble a gypsy.

"Valentine, however, could easy pass for a gypsy. He is twenty-one years of age, stands 5 feet 8 inches and weighs about 125 pounds. He has the dark complexion and high cheek bones of the gypsy.

"Mrs. Lord and the two cousins of Leslie said nothing about the presence of a woman and two children in the truck. This was explained by Mrs. Stanley.

"Valentine and Tom came home late that night from Duxbury. It was past midnight, but I was awake. I asked them where they had been, and they said they had gone to Duxbury to deliver a table with a woven grass top they had sold there. They said nothing about Leslie.

LOADED UP TRUCK.

"But in the morning they loaded up the trucks—Tom, Georgia, the two kids and Valentine. I didn't dream

DUXBURY BRIDGE AND GYPSY TRIBE THAT WAS GRILLED

Photo below is of gypsies encamped at Cranston, R. I., who were questioned when a car resembling that in which Miss Leslie Tolman fled from Duxbury was seen near that town. They are typical of the gypsies with whose life the missing girl was infatuated.

ALARM FROM 'DANGER BOX'; $2,000 WOOL FIRE IN E. BOSTON

Hot steam pipes, under a flooring in the Merchants' Wool Scouring Company, Webster and Mills streets, East Boston, today caused spontaneous combustion in a pile of wool. Damage amounting to $2,000 resulted.

Thomas O'Rourke, watchman, discovered smoke and rang in the alarm from Box 26, known in fire department circles as "the danger box."

The factory is a two-story wooden building in the heart of other wooden structures used for manufacturing purposes which are flanked by tenement houses.

MAN IS HURLED TO DEATH IN MARLBORO FACTORY

Marlboro, July 9.—John W. Kelley, forty-seven years old, of No. 1 Gates avenue, Marlboro, was instantly killed in the Curtis shoe factory today when he was caught in a shafting and whirled violently about from floor to ceiling several times. His body was nearly cut in two before the power could be shut off. He was operating a boxing machine, and it is not known how he became caught. He leaves a widow and one child.

would refrain from resuming their picketing activities and with the understanding that they would accept fines and appeal. The arrangement was brought about by counsel for the strikers.

PICKETING CONTINUES.

In the meantime picketing at the Diamond factories will continue throughout the day, the police agreeing to make no more arrests until Tuesday.

"We will preserve law and order. That is our only interest in this strike," said City Marshal Donald T. Guerin when asked why the police stopped activities with 124 arrests.

A large number of shoe workers in numerous factories here went on strike in the middle of May.

OTHERS JOIN STRIKE.

They demanded abrogation of the contract between the local Shoe Manufacturers' Association and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union which calls for submission of disputes to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

In its place they asked for arbitration of disputes by a local board and demanded an immediate wage increase.

The charters of some of the crat locals which had voted to strike were revoked by the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and the strikers formed a new organization called the Brockton District Shoe Workers' Organization.

In the early days of the strike some of the factories were forced to close and others to curtain because of lack of help, but recently all have been in operation.

$20,000 FIRE IN POLISH PLANT

SPENDS LAST CENT ON BABE SHE BOUGHT

"Don't take her from me. Please, please don't. I paid for her. I spent my last cent on her. Please don't take her away."

On her knees Mrs. Alida Cleveland begged it of police. She bought a baby. They took it from her and now she's in the psycopathic hospital under observation. All day long she walks the floors, sobs and moans. They've taken the baby, the baby she bought and because she hungered to shower mother love upon it, they think she's insane.

Mrs. Cleveland formerly lived in Ayer. She's young and comely. Six months ago she lost her own baby, she says. She wanted another. Seeing a child advertised for adoption she called at an address in Somerville. The baby was Barbara Erwin, daughter of Mrs. Marion Erwin of West Newton street.

Barbara was boarding at the home of Mrs. Hazel Davenport. It was there the motherand Mrs. Cleveland went. Little Barbara crinkled a chubby face prettily when Mrs. Cleveland stooped above her crib.

She cooed when the woman hugged her to her coat. A moment later money changed hands and Mrs. Cleveland hurried away.

She went to Washington. Every dollar she possessed she lavished in finery on the child. Two days she was arrested in the capital on a warrant from Somerville; she is under observation here and may be charged with kidnapping.

WARD'S LAWYER IS CALLED IN PROBE

White Plains, N. Y., July 9 (I. N. S.).—The Grand Jury investigation into the alleged slaying of Clarence Peters, youthful ex-marine, by Walter S. Ward, son of George Ward, millionaire New York baker, was resumed today after two weeks delay.

Allen R. Campbell, one of Ward's attorneys, was expected to be a witness. Campbell has been served with three subpoenas, ordering him to produce books and records removed from the office of the elder Ward.

Campbell, it is understood, will be asked to explain a statement prepared by the Ward attorneys at the time of the slaying and given to Sheriff George Warner of Westchester County.

State Acts in Phone Strike: Sends Chief to Lawrence

William H. O'Brien, chief of the Telephone and Telegraph Division of the State Department of Public Utilities, left today for Lawrence to investigate conditions of the strike there.

Answering this charge, the Lawrence police department, through Lieutenant Heffernan, said it was a lie and a slander.

PRAISES STRIKERS.

Lieutenant Heffernan said:

"The conduct of the strikers has been exemplary in every way. There has been no interference with strike-breakers, no violence.

"All the girls have done is to kid the men who came to take their places, and I don't see how we can help that."

The telephone company, in a letter to the Chamber of Commerce, said that Lawrence taxi-drivers and taxi-owners refused to take strikebreakers to work, and that hotelkeepers refused to lodge strikebreakers.

Public sentiment in Lawrence is heavily with the strikers, who have succeeded in effecting an almost 100 per cent walkout.

At the conference between the warring unions, to be held tonight at Young's Hotel, Annie F. Molloy, president of Local 1-A, it is said, will demand the unconditional surrender of the strikers and the giving up of the charter held by Julia S. O'Connor. These conditions compiled with, Miss Molloy will use her influence to end the strike.

Much bitterness against Miss O'Connor, because of her emphatic denunciation of the company, and the officials of the Old Local, was manifested at a meeting of Local 1-A, by those who addressed the meeting. The committee was unanimous that Miss O'Connor must be shorn of her power, Miss Molloy was among those who addressed the meeting.

The striking operators, although they have withdrawn pickets in Boston temporarily, expressed, through their officers, a renewed determination to win the strike.

Telephone Company's Official Statement

The company's statement today on the telephone strike said:

"The report on force conditions at 9 o'clock this morning showed no marked change from that of Saturday. Central offices in the Boston and suburban districts have been recruited to substantially their full normal quotas. The recruiting and training of new operators will continue, however, in order to have operators who volunteered for temporary service.

"Springfield reported 46 additional new operators on duty this morning and Worcester 16. At both of these points, as well as at all other affected points, recruiting will be continued for the same reasons as at Boston.

"Lawrence reported five new operators on duty this morning, making a total of 30. This group, composed largely of new operators, will be reinforced by a number of experienced operators from various mer-

Boston central offices, who volunteered to go to Lawrence, and help restore service at that point. By arranging the working forces at the switchboard so that an experienced operator sits beside each new operator, the necessary teamwork will be brought about. The new operator will be greatly helped by her experienced associate, and the immediate result will be a marked improvement in the service.

"This morning's report showed more of the striking force gradually sifting back. At Walpole 4 returned, Milford, 1 and Waltham 1. New operators were reported on duty at Providence, Pawtucket, Lynn, Salem, Framingham, Franklin, Marlboro and a number of other points.

To Protest Lynn Teacher Being Strike-Breaker

Councillor Michael J. Carroll, business agent of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of Lynn, announced today he would file a protest with the Lynn city council against a school teacher working in the Lynn telephone exchange as a strike-breaker. Mayor McPhetres said to day:

"The teacher in question can do as she pleases. While I do not approve, there is nothing I can do, as teachers can work in whatever position they choose during the summer months."

Company Again Scored by Miss O'Connor

Several hundred striking telephone operators and sympathizers held a mass-meeting today at Tremont Temple, addressed by Miss Julia O'Connor, strike leader, and others.

A scathing arraignment of the telephone company was the subject of the address by Miss O'Connor, who said in part:

"The company is violating labor laws in various sections of New England by employing girls as young as 14 years of age.

"Subscribers who us spay stations have been overcharged ever since the strike began. I know of cases where five nickels were dropped to get one call. The green operators dodge subscribers by lying to them—telling them they are getting 'don't answer' and 'busy signal' replies.

"Many of the strike-breaking operators now on duty were formerly in the employ of the company, and had been dismissed for inefficiency and discourtesy to subscribers.

"In a statement recently issued the telephone company admitted that the girls were only student operators during the first nine months of their employment, and that it was long time afte, that before they began to give even average efficiency. At Beach exchange, which normally has 385 highly trained operators to take care of the service of nearly 400,000 calls daily, there are today only 30 experienced operators, and yet they claim that we 'give in terms.'

The local linemen's union su' scribed $100 to the fund for the str ers and announced that $2,000 would be raised within the week by a assessment on each of the 800 m bers of the union.

James Templeton of the lo painters' union promised the fina cial and moral support of his orga ization. He said that several of th girls now being used as strikebreak ers were relatives of members of his union. He had the names of these girls, he said, and pressure is being used to get the girls to leave their switchboards. The tenor of the meeting was:

"Fight it out 'til it takes all Sum-

Legislature to Be Asked to Sponsor Plan to Aid Wage-Earners

A State appropriation of $10,000,000 to build homesteads for wage earners is provided in a bill filed today by M. A. O'Brien, Jr., of Dorchester, for consideration of the next Legislature.

Mr. O'Brien's bill states that it is filed "to provide relief for the State's inhabitants who are without adequate shelter because of the shortage of dwellings."

His plan is for the State to build the homes and sell them to thrifty wage-earners on an easy-payment plan which would guarantee the State against loss while providing its citizens with homes without extravagant cost.

Another bill filed by him would allow insurance companies to invest their funds in home-building to protect the people from usurious landlords during the housing shortage.

Mr. O'Brien is the author of a number of State laws, including the one which made the Mayflower the floral emblem of Massachusetts.

Henry Ford Turns Handspring; Grins at Osler Fan

South Sudbury, July 9.—On the lawn of the Wayside Inn, Henry Ford introduced an effective argument to prove that men should not be shot on reaching sixty.

A companion mentioned Dr. Osler, who argued in favor of sexagenarianicide. Henry did not take kindly to the conversation, and turned a handspring on the lawn.

COX REFUSES TO PARDON FISH MEN

His refusal was sent in reply to Dr. David Johnson, institutions commissioner of Boston, who had pleaded for the release of two venerable Fish Trust members who are severely ill at Long Island.

Governor Cox said it had been the policy of Governors not to interfere or grant pardons to prisoners sentenced to serve less than six months. The Fist Trust men are serving five-months' sentences.

His refusal does not stand in the way of granting a parole to them, however. The petition for a parole has been filed with the probation officers of Suffolk County.

Steps are being taken also to have the two prisoners transferred to the Rutland Prison Camp, from which they may be liberated, without further delay.

PRESENT UNITED FRONT

Trainmen Join Enginemen to Obtain 20 to 30 Per Cent. Increase

Columbus, O., July 9 (I.N.S.)—The Big Four Railroad Brotherhoods are expected to launch a concerted drive for wage increases of 20 to 30 per cent in regional conferences to be held in July and August, it became known here today.

Western Association representatives of the Brotherhood met in Chicago July 31, while Eastern and Southern conferences will take place later, in Cleveland and Washington. It was first announced that only the engineers and trainmen would demand increased wages, but it is now known on good authority that the other two Brotherhoods will back them up.

POWERFUL COMBINE.

The Brotherhoods combined make the most powerful railroad labor combination in the world and, should they decide upon a strike to enforce demands, transportation would be brought to a dead stop. It was understood the Brotherhoods want restored to them the wages that obtained prior to the two cuts made by the United States Railroad Labor Board at Chicago.

A third cut was forecasted, but it was never authorized, as the railroad situation was tied up by the shopmen's strike.

The two cuts were something over 20 per cent., and the brotherhood officials claimed the wages of the highest class railroad labor was cut below that of other craftsmen in the less skilled trades.

CHAMBER TO ACT.

The district chairman of each of the four brotherhoods will present to the regional conferences the opinions of the various local unions and upon their recommendations will be based the demands to be made upon the Managers' Association of the railroads.

The present brotherhood contracts will expire October 1. According to brotherhood representatives here, the Big Four chiefs hope to have a settlement made with the railroad managers prior to that time.

LIEUTENANT MAUGHAN

FLIER MAUGHAN PASSES OVER ILLINOIS

Springfield, Ill., July 9.—Lieut. Grant Russell L. Maughan passed over this city at 10:23, Central Standard Time, flying low, in his dawn-to-dusk flight from New York to San Francisco. A dispatch from Indianapolis showed he passed over that city at 9:45 o'clock, Central Time.

McCook Field, Dayton, O., July 9 (I.N.S.).—Lieut. R. L. Maughan arrived here at 5:55 and departed at 6:32 confident he would reach San Francisco in time for supper.

Maughan, starting from New York at 4:58, encountered a fog bank and got 100 miles off his course. He was an hour and 35 minutes behind schedule here.

The flier was in fine condition. Gasoline and benzol were taken aboard here and the ship was off on the second lap of its record-setting flight, after repairs to a broken brace on the plane's vertical fin were made.

STILL CONFIDENT.

After getting out of the fog in the East, Maughan traveled west, but did not recognize any familiar spots until he passed over Akron.

In order to reach this field in safety, he throttled down his motor to 120 miles an hour and it was at that speed he landed.

The 100 miles took up an hour, but he was confident he would get back on schedule.

Mitchel Field, N. Y., July 9 (AP).—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan, U. S. A., piloting a Curtiss pursuit plane, hopped off at 4:56 a. m. Eastern Standard daylight saving time today on the first leg of his dawn-to-dusk flight across the continent.

Lieutenant Maughan expected to reach San Francisco in 15½ hours of daylight flying. The distance is estimated at 2,640 miles and an average speed of 180 miles an hour was scheduled.

Four stops were on the list. At McCook Field, Dayton, O.; Municipal Field, St. Joseph, Mo.; Air Mail Field, Cheyenne, Wyo., and Saldure, Utah.

EX-JUSTICE DAY DIES AT HIS SUMMER HOME

Cleveland, July 9.—William R. Day, former associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, died today at Mackinac Island, Michigan, his Summer home. His son, William L. Day, and the latter's wife were with him when he died. The funeral will be Thursday, with burial at Canton, O.

Other surviving sons are Luther Day, of Cleveland; Rufus Day of Washington, D. C., and Stephen Day, of Chicago. Justice Robert H. Day of the Ohio Supreme Court and David R. Day of Canton, are brothers of the late jurist.

William R. Day was born at Painesville, O., April 17, 1849. He had been a notable figure in the national government for more than a quarter of a century.

Brought to Washington in 1897 by President McKinley, who appointed him Assistant Secretary of State, he subsequently was advanced to the secretaryship and later was appointed to the Supreme Court, from which he resigned on November 14, 1922, to become umpire of the Mixed Claims Commission set up to settle claims arising from the war.

Upon this post also he resigned on May 15 last, on account of ill health.

While a member of the Supreme Court he was selected to deliver some of the Court's most important opinions, notably in the United Shoe Machinery and the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific cases.

HARDING SKIRTS ALASKAN COAST, GOING NORTH

Aboard the U. S. S. Henderson with President Harding, July 9 (A.P.)—The naval transport Henderson, carrying President and Mrs. Harding steamed northward along the Alaskan coast today after making first acquaintance with the territory yesterday at Metlakahtla and Ketchikan.

An all-night sail brought the transport off Wrangell, where the party will go ashore for a short visit before proceeding to Juneau.

The President was very favorably impressed at his first stops in Alaska, particularly by the appearance of the people.

A break in the cable Friday and Saturday, whereby the President was isolated from the world because radio messages from the Henderson were held up at Ketchikan, brought to the attention of the President and the Cabinet officers accompanying him the necessity of giving Alaska more ample communication facilities. The President also was impressed by the perfect Summer weather, which made superfluous the overcoats brought by members of the party.

A study of the problems of the natives who complained at Metlakahtla that the salmon canneries were consuming their food supply has been inaugurated by the President.

OIL KING GREETS CROWD AT CHURCH

New York, July 9.—The silver head of an old man bowed humbly in prayer beneath the simple, rustic arches of the New Community Church in Pocantico Hills yesterday. The old man was John D. Rockefeller, and the day marked his eighty-fourth birthday anniversary.

The eager, young minister was praying:

"We ask Thy gracious blessing for those who are aged and who are approaching that greater fellowship with Thee."

ON ARM OF VALET.

A silent crowd watched him on the arm of his valet proceed to a pew near the pulpit.

When the congregation joined with their minister in responsive reading the aged millionaire, who has amassed a fortune which has made his name an American tradition, repeated the words of Jesus: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

The people in the pews may have wondered if there was anything significant in the following words of the sermon:

"The heroic life is the life that puts self last of all—it is not merely comfort or respectability or success.

"There is a difference between certain business men we have today with materialistic attitudes toward life and other business men who have the spirit of Christ in their hearts."

GIVES AWAY NICKELS.

When the white-haired millionaire turned to leave the church he was surrounded by the congregation, all of whom pressed his hand and congratulated him.

"Thank you, thank you, very much," he replied with just the slightest quaver.

He reached for the hand of Marguerite Graham, eleven, and, with a pat and a whisper, pressed something into her palm which she squeezed tightly. Surprisingly, and to the destruction of the long-established hobby, Mr. Rockefeller had given her a shiny, new buffalo nickel instead of the customary dime he has distributed with so much obvious pleasure for years.

SCORES JUSTICE FOR MARRYING YOUNG GIRLS

Lawrence, July 9.—"Justices of the peace in Maine and New Hampshire should have their licenses revoked and action K. 'slop against them by the Governors of those States," said Judge Mahoney today after hearing evidence against two girl minors who had eloped to Manchester and been married on July 2.

They are Margaret Thibault, fifteen years old, of No. 208 Essex street, and Agnes McCann, sixteen of No. 141 Hampshire street. The former married Louis Gallo, twenty, of Valley street, the latter Samuel Tomarchio, twenty-two, of No. 37 Chestnut street. Warrants were issued for the men on statutory grounds.

The double marriage was performed by Arthur Hayden, Manchester justice.

"These States," declared Judge Mahoney, "are Gretna Greens. They marry anybody who comes along and no questions are asked. It is high time something was done to curb these justices who do not seem to care."

MAN BELIEVED DEAD PICKED UP AT SEA

John Vattenberg, who has been thought dead for several days, was brought into port today by the trawler Louis M. Winslow. Vattenberg was lost from the schoontr Commonwealth on George's Bank last week in a fog, and he was given up for lost. He said he rowed for twenty hours in his dory, when he was picked up by an outward bound schooner. A day or two later the schooner fell in with the homeward bound trawler and he was transferred.

ENGLISH STRIKERS SPURN WORK CALL

London, July 9 (I.N.S.)—England's striking dock workers today failed to heed the orders of their leaders to return to work. The strikers, however, lost a point when the transport workers acted not to join the strike. More than 60,000 dock workers are out.

FOUR WEALTHY MEN HURT IN PLANE CRASH

Naugatuck, Conn., July 9.—Four residents, passengers in an airplane of the Bee Line, Inc., of this borough, were injured in a crash at the Naugatuck Aviation Field at Bethany. The injured are Frederick F. Schaeffer, rubber goods manufacturer; George T. Wigmore, treasurer of the Rivdon Manufacturing Company; Mrs. George T. Wigmore, and Miss Minibel Schaffer, a daughter of Mr. Schaffer.

SO. AMERICAN LINER ASHORE AT BERMUDA

New York, July 8 (I.N.S.).—The 10,660 ton liner Vauban, of the Lamport and Holt line has gone ashore in the channel in the port of Bermuda, according to a message received here today. The Vauban, carrying passengers, was enroute from South America to New York.

Telegraph Briefs

Colorado Springs, Col.—Pat Murphy, 102-year-old pioneer, the oldest Knight of Columbus in the world, is missing. He had planned to climb Pikes Peak. Whether he is lost on the mountain is not known.

Chicago.—Nearly seven hundred men and women were arrested over the week-end in scores of raids on saloons, pool rooms, disorderly houses and gambling houses.

Washington.—A committee for the study of seasonal activities in the building industry, with a view to recommending methods of stimulating irregularity of employment and lowering costs, has been appointed by Secretary Hoover. Its first session will be held here July 10.

Newburgh, N. Y.—Fire destroyed two cars, the midway switch and more than 200 feet of track and roadbed of the Incline Cable Railway on Mount Beacon, near here, marooning hundreds of visitors on the mountain top. The fire started from a cigarette tossed on oil-soaked timbers.

THINK ABANDONED CAR RUM CARRIER

Rowley, July 8.—An abandoned wrecked automobile was found on the Newburyport turnpike near Central street.

The State Police found that the numbers of the machine had been carried away and that apparently an effort had been made to chisel off the engine number.

It is suspected that the car was stolen and was being used for rum running. Nobody was injured so far as known.

GERMAN BEES HUM HOME FROM FRANCE

Berlin, July 9.—German bees won't stay in France. French apiarists are complaining through the French newspapers that swarms delivered to them by the German under the Versailles treaty are rapidly flying back across the Rhine. Commenting on the French complaint, the one local paper says: "Undoubtedly these homing swarms of bees are acting on orders from Berlin."

DENIES NEW TRIAL TO 'WHIPPING BOSS'

Lake City, Fla., July 9.—Judge M. A. McMullen denied a motion for a new trial for Thomas Walter Higginbotham, former whipping boss, who was found guilty of second degree murder in connection with the death of Marin Tabert of North Dakota. Judge McMullen sentenced Higginbotham to 20 years.

UGLY MAN INSPIRES LOVE AS WELL AS ADONIS, TELLEGEN SAYS

PARENTAL AFFECTION HIS IDEAL

Farrar's Ex-Mate Believes Motherhood Essential for Actresses

By GENE FOWLER.

(Copyright, 1923, by Universal Service.)

New York, July 9.—Lou Tellegen, weighing 175 pounds ringside, is boxing six brisk rounds daily with a trained sparring partner at an uptown gymnasium.

Lou Tellegen

Having consented his quota of six rounds, Mr. Tellegen welcomed the interviewer into his studio at No. 18 East Fifty-seventh street. In white flannels and a collar that made him all the more of a Lord Byron for looks, Tellegen wanted to discuss boxing, but consented to talk about women and love. Said Tellegen:

IS "AMATEUR" AT LOVE.

"Of course I want to speak of boxing, as I know much about it. I have only been a beginner at love. Only such geniuses and artists as Gabrielle D'Annunzio are qualified to speak with authority on love."

"I am just as fast with my left hand against a rueing attack as ever—but you were talking of love. No, a man doesn't have to be handsome to inspire love. This is fortunate indeed, for some of us.

"Look at D'Annunzio. He is little. He is bald. He is getting old. But he captivates one immediately. He is a human envelopment and can talk about anything. His eyes are wonderful. They look like diamond actually have flashing gold specks in them.

GREATER IN MOTHERHOOD.

"One of my dear friends has two beautiful children. I play with them as if the little darlings were my own. I should be studying. I want to take them to the park and see the animals, but my friend warns me that it would be fatal for me to be seen being kind to children, lest it make inkind re-marks about love. I do not want any more funny talk.

"Certain great stars of artistic ays think they cannot be happy if they have children. Why, I don't believe there is any true happiness possible without them. No great actress lived or ever did live who might not have risen to greater heights on the wings of motherhood.

"I point out Madame Schumann-Heinke for one. You ask me how many children she has? I forget, at the count was high. She is the greatest woman artist of the day. And I recall to you the great Bernhardt. Her son, Maurice, was the greatest triumph of her life.

PARENT LOVE HIGHEST.

"I was her leading man. I was in a fire saloon when I was a young-ster at the meetings of the graduates of the day. I knew of her love for Maurice and what it meant to her. Where you ask me to speak of love instead of any advice boxing I tell you of the greatest love of them all—the love of a parent for a child. That is the love we should know about. That is the love that real dreams are based on.

Yes, Tellegen likes American women. He thinks they are beautiful, but added that "women are beautiful whether they are." He thinks that American women have an independence of thought, and deed that makes them supreme. He went on:

U. S. WOMAN GREAT PAL.

"The American woman is a great pal. She tells you frankly not to make love to her. And that makes it possible to talk about the scientific aspects of astronomy instead of confining the study to spooning on the moonlight."

Of course, Mr. Tellegen doesn't anticipate that the jolly custom of holding hands ever will become popular with the masses. But he thinks that women and men can and do have platonic friendships. He declared that "millions" of persons have love affairs, mild, temperate or violent, which never come to public notice and never would be noticed if they did. But, he added, let an artist have any sort of affair and the world's tongues wag.

"Marry again? Well, give me time to think, for I have been a bachelor for such a short time."

ORGANIZED LABOR CONDEMNS RADICAL

Philadelphia, July 9.—Condemning radical labor leaders as a menace to organized labor, delegates of the Central Labor Union withdrew the credentials of C. P. McCarthy, an organizer and representative of William Z. Foster, internationally known communist.

DUDLEY STREET, LANGDON TO EAST COTTAGE

Dorchester residents complain of the delay in repairing this section of highway. Traffic jams and accidents, they say result from the torn up road bed. Work begun a year ago has not been completed.

BOSTON TO GET NEXT ELKS' CONVENTION, ATLANTA SAYS

Atlanta, Ga., July 9.—It's "Hello Bill" in Atlanta today.

From the North, South, East and West, thousands of members of the antlered tribe are trekking into the Georgia capital for the fifty-ninth Grand Lodge convention and reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, which opens officially tonight.

Governor Clifford M. Walker will deliver an address of welcome and Mayor Walter A. Sims will extend Atlanta's greetings.

According to the Atlanta Constitution, Boston already has been decided upon as the convention city for next year. Early estimates place the number of delegates already here at more than 12,000.

"BODY AND SOUL" CLINIC LURES SCORE IN GOTHAM

New York, July 9.—More than a score of persons from all walks of life, most of them suffering from nervous or mental trouble, but some on crutches or with defective eyesight, attended the opening today of "The Body and Soul Clinic" at the historic Church of St. Mark's on the Bowery. All were given preliminary physical examinations to be followed by other treatments later.

"What the physicians can't do (the clergy will do and what the clergy can't do the doctors will do," said Dr. Edward Cosbey, assistant rector of the church. He said clinics would be held daily. Religious services in connection with the work will be conducted every Sunday.

Dr. Edward Spencer Coles, a nerve specialist, said that 95 per cent. of the cases of illness today were due chiefly to nerves.

PACIFIC PACT RATIFIED BY DEPUTIES OF FRANCE

Paris, July 9. (A.P.)—The Chamber of Deputies today unanimously voted the bill approving the Washington treaty relating to the Pacific, concluded on December 12, 1921, by France, the United States, Great Britain and Japan, covering their island possessions in the Pacific and the declaration adopted on the same date relating to the Pacific mandates.

It also accepted the complementary agreement made in Washington on February 6, 1922, in which application of the treaty was precisely defined as it concerns Japan.

FRENCH TAKE OVER BIG STEEL PLANT; GERMAN WORKERS QUIT

A large quantity of finished products was taken over, as also was the coal supply of the plant, on which the tax imposed by the occupying authorities had not been paid.

VAGRANT HELD AS SUSPECT IN DEATH OF GOVERNESS

Scarsdale, N. Y., July 9.—After severe cross-examination, during which he protested his innocence of the murder of Miss Dorothy Kauffman, Bronxville governess, who was stabbed in the home of Mamie of an insane asylum.

FOUR CHILDREN RESCUED FROM BLAZE IN NORTON

Norton, July 9.—Four children of Edward Bowles were saved by neighbors when fire destroyed their home near Lake Winneconnet today. Damage was estimated at $2,500. While a sick child was being given medical treatment by the parents the bed clothes caught fire and the flames spread through the house. The children asleep upstairs were carried to the street by friends.

N. H. ROAD EXTENDS EFFICIENCY BONUSES

New Haven, July 9.—The production and bonus basis of pay which has been in effect at the eastern end of the New Haven Railroad system has been extended to the Cedar Hill yards. Under the plan, the employes are guaranteed their stated hourly rate as a base wage and the bonus is paid employes over and above their regular wages. It is determined by the efficiency with which each individual has worked during the period provided by schedules.

26TH DIVISION IN FULL SWING AT DEVENS

Camp Devens, July 9.—Five thousand women, the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of the 26th Division, thronged Camp Devens on visitors' day.

The men of the 26th, who arrived a few days previously, had thoroughly policed the camp, and put it in top shape.

Major-General Charles C. Rickard of Washington, chief of the United States militia, visited the annual encampment of the New England National Guard at Devens, and declared the camp to be an ideal location.

GUEST OF LOGAN.

Major-General Rickard is here unofficially as the guest of Major-General Edward L. Logan, commander of the more than 8,000 National Guardsmen encamped here. He leaves today for Peekskill, N. Y., to inspect the 27th Division, National Guard.

Major-General Rickard will, on his return to Washington, recommend to the War Department that Camp Devens be continued as a military training camp.

Sergeant William F. Hogan, Battery A, 101st Field Artillery, killed at Concord Junction while attempting to stop a pair of run-away horses, was eulogized by Major-General Logan, who said the act was but one of the many brave deeds performed during the soldier's life time.

TARGET PRACTICE STARTS.

Target practice and maneuvers are under way. Artillery and infantry marched out to their ranges, and tested their ability.

A detachment of twenty-one regular army officers of the 13th Infantry and fifty non-commissioned officers, under command of Brigadier-General Melvern Hill Burnham, have arrived to instruct the guardsmen.

July 29, the guardsmen will hold an athletic carnival, including baseball, swimming and field sports. Four trophies will be awarded.

July 14, Major John E. Atkinson, in command of the 26th Supply Train, will leave with thirty-six trucks for Hanover, N. H., where the 101st Engineers are encamped, to take their equipment there. The supply train will be on the road approximately a week.

STREET REPAIR DELAY CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

Torn up a year and left uncompleted, Dudley street, from Langdon to East Cottage streets, Dorchester, has been the scene of accidents in which two men were seriously injured, autos on automobiles and wagons have been smashed when the drivers turned out to avoid killing people. Traffic by car and vehicle has often been stalled.

Several big snow storms interfered with the work of a Worcester contractor, who was given the job to repave Dudley street from Blue Hill avenue to Upham's corner, because he was the lowest bidder.

One side of the thoroughfare was finished and work was started on the other side in the late Fall. But the storms caused the contractor to fail and give up the job.

As a result the street has been littered with the work of a Worcester firm, when the snow melted, the street on the north side was a mass of holes. Residents of intersecting streets have complained to the city authorities.

A gang of men was assigned to repair the street this month but have stopped work from some reason and several men were put to work to break the paving blocks in two.

RUSSIA BARONESS AMONG ALIEN HORDE

New York, July 9.—A woman, who on her journey to America came to be known as "The strange woman of the second cabin," spent last week in the crowded detention quarters of Ellis Island, while immigration officials were determining if she came to the United States in violation of the contract labor law.

Her gentle breeding, education and refined manners could not be mistaken. The authorities broke through their usual red tape and finally learned she was the Baroness Mara Liller Steinheil of Russia, fleeing from the Bolshevist regime. She was released in custody of a representative of the Y. W. C. A.

GERMAN CRITIC IS GIVEN 12 YEARS

Berlin, July 9. (AP)—Professor Fuchs, the Munich dramatic critic charged with treason in connection with the recent alleged attempt at a Bavarian coup d'etat, has been convicted, according to dispatches received here, and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment at hard labor with a fine of 2,000,00 marks.

Herr Wunck, found guilty as an accessory, was given fifteen months' imprisonment and a fine of 20,100,000 marks.

STRIKE BARRED BY PAPER MAKERS

Holyoke, July 9.—Eagle lodge of papermakers will not go on strike to enforce its demand for a wage increase and changes in working conditions, Official announcement of the strike vote taken last week was made at a special meeting of the union. It was said that a two-thirds vote of membership was necessary to call a strike, and the two-thirds was lacking by eight votes.

HUNGRY BUGS HERE TO PREY ON PESTS

Three cases of hungry bugs arrived in port today from South Africa. They are to be shipped to California to prey upon insect pests that attack fruit trees. The bugs were put on board the steamship Western Glen at Cape Town in a dormant state, it being Winter now in that part of the world, and kept in refrigerators on the voyage. The Western Glen also brought fifteen passengers, among them Mrs. H. G. Daly of Boston and her two sons. Her husband died in Johannesburg a few months ago and Mrs. Daly is returning to make her home here.

3 STAGINGS BREAK 7 ARE HURT

Seven men were injured within half an hour today in East Boston when stagings collapsed in three places. John Gill, twenty-one, of No. 549 Bennington street, and John McCormack, twenty-nine, of No. 440 Lovall street, were at work painting the three-story house of Martin Costello at No. 19 Neptune road. A gooseneck slipped and one end of the ladder staging dropped. Gill fell forty-five feet. McCormick managed to hold to a rope.

Four plasterers fell 20 feet when a staging at the new Lyman Grammar School building on Gove street collapsed. All sustained abrasions and contusions.

DR. KATE W. BARRETT GETS WELCOME HERE

Dr. Kate Waller Barrett of Virginia, head of the American Legion Auxiliary, was welcomed today to Massachusetts by Governor Cox, to Boston by Mayor Curley and to New England by the American Legion. She is also head of the Florence Crittenden League and of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Virginia. Dr. Barrett was escorted by the officers of the Massachusetts Legion Auxiliary—Mrs. Helen A. Bishop of Leicester, president; Miss Anna Manion of Waltham vice-president; Miss Mary Whitaker of Roxbury, secretary, and Miss Katharine Parker of Lancaster, Worcester County member of the Executive Committee.

L. H. JOSSELYN DIES AT HOME IN NEWTON

Lewis H. Josselyn, treasurer of the C. E. Osgood Company, and one of the best known business men in the city, died at his home, No. 71 Waterston road, Newton. He was born in Phillips, Me., on September 24, 1848, where his father conducted a country store, and later moved to Portland with his parents, remaining there until after his graduation from Kent's Hill Academy. When not much more than a boy he entered the furniture business, first as a traveling salesman for several of the larger New England manufacturing concerns, and later as the owner of his own furniture factories in Manchester and Keene, N. H.

HEAD SIXTEEN YEARS.

Mr. Josselyn moved to Manchester in 1874, and remained there until 1907, when he came to Boston to take over the financial management of the C. E. Osgood Company. For sixteen years he has been the active head of this house and under his direction it has grown from a very modest business to one of the largest retail furniture houses in New England. He had many business interests outside of the Osgood Company and has served as a director of several corporations. For nearly forty years he had been a director of the Amoskeag National Bank in Manchester, the largest and most influential financial institution in New Hampshire.

THREE CHILDREN SURVIVE.

Mr. Josselyn is survived by one sister, Mrs. Warren W. Cole of Portland, Me.; three children, Mrs. Nicholas Young and Mrs. Frank F. Longwin, of Newton, and Howard B. Josselyn of Waltham, who has been associated with his father in business enterprises for more than twenty years. There are also seven grandchildren surviving.

Funeral services will be held at Mr. Josselyn's home in Newton tomorrow at 1 p. m. and burial will be in Manchester, N. H.

NEW DRUG MAKES CONVICTS TELL THE TRUTH ABOUT CRIMES

MURDERER FREED BY OPIATE

New Drug Tried With Success on Prisoners Held in San Quentin

San Francisco, July 9.—"Truth extraction" from criminals by the use of scopolamin, the new drug which is said to make its users incapable of lying, was explained here by Dr. R. E. House, of Ferris, Tex., who used the alkaloid in a series of amazing experiments on convicts in the San Quentin Penitentiary.

That scopolamin completely inhibits the mind, producing unconsciousness and a quiet brain while allowing the centre of hearing to function, Dr. House explained as the basis of the drug's operation.

The tests made on prisoners in San Quentin were regarded as highly successful. One man was proved innocent of murder, a second admitted a crime and a third disclosed his identity.

The experiments brought on a widespread controversy among medical and scientific men, and the efficacy of the drug in its "truth extraction" power is the subject of arguments pro and con, from New York to San Francisco.

WHAT DR. HOUSE WRITES.

"I must earnestly request the readers of the article not to confound the technique required for obstetrics with the method advised to be followed in criminal work. In obstetrics you only attempt to alleviate pain. If you made a woman as drunk as you should a suspected criminal, you would stop for a while her pains.

"The object of using scopolamin in criminology is to inhibit the mind with its stored events, called memory—consequently they should be made totally unconscious to produce an absolutely quiet brain. To completely destroy every appreciation of their environment, to eliminate every vestige of the will power, to make it impossible for them to even think, dream, or reason, such patients are only completely scopolaminized.

HEARING WORKS FIRST.

"Upon such patients I have proven satisfactorily that the centre of hearing is the first centre in the brain to function. The centre of feeling is next. The centre of sight is next. The centre of smelling is last. Also, the centre of hearing makes the other four centres subconscious and, furthermore, the centre of hearing can make the centres of the other four senses function before the special nerve to each of the four centres can make its own centre function.

"When the centre of hearing is stimulated, it manifests the only function it possesses, viz: memory. Hence the auditory centre is able to call into play whatever association neurons are required to complete the answer to a question asked.

"When a person is too intoxicated to reason or think, it should be easy to see why the answer comes like the knee jerk, automatically, and not from control of the will power."

HOW TRUTH-TELLING DRUG TAKES EFFECT

TAXI DRIVER LANDS 2 THIEF SUSPECTS

Manchester, N. H., July 9.—Alleged premature elation landed two Manchester men in the local police station, charged with the robbery of a large sum of money from a house on North Church street. Joseph Routeau, No. 114 North Church street, and Peter White, No. 633 Elm street hired a taxicab. The driver heard their conversation and communicated with the police.

GERMAN OFFICIALS CONDEMN SABOTAGE

Coblenz, July 8.—The German governor general of the Rhine provinces posted a proclamation strongly condemning sabotage, and a number of the German officials in occupied territory, according to the French, likewise have expressed their disapproval of violence against the occupation forces. The French authorities assert that this change in attitude is due to instructions from Berlin.

MALDEN ALLIGATOR RETURNED TO HOME

Pete, four-foot alligator found on the lawn of John W. Logan at No. 12 Garland street, Malden, was dragged back home by Mrs. Anne G. Tully of No. 37 Walnut street, from

MORSE MOTION FOR ACQUITTAL IS DENIED

Washington, July 9.—Justice Stafford refused today to direct a verdict of acquittal in the case of Charles W. Morse, his three sons and four others, who are on trial on indictments charging conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with war-time contracts.

At the same time Justice Stafford overruled motions of counsel for the dismissal of the indictments against those defendants.

With these rulings the trial will go forward with the defense required to submit its case in reply to that presented by the government in the more than two months that the trial has been in progress.

HOOP SKIRTS SEEN AT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, July 8.—The hoop skirt is making a bid for popularity among the shore visitors in the fashion parade. Dozens of hoop effects made their appearances. Small hoops that fit over the hips narrowing out rippling panels of gauzy texture were much in evidence.

The fair wearers were otherwise laced in on the style of Colonial dames.

"It can't be done," was the comment of the knowing ones on the opposite sex. "Corsets are too uncomfortable; the average girl will not lace herself in like that."

BOSTON FIRM GETS $2,000,000 CONTRACT

Monroe, La., July 9.—The Brown Paper Co., Inc., of Monroe, organized by pulp and paper manufacturers of Orange, Tex., has awarded the contract for the construction of a $2,000,000 paper mill near East Monroe, to the Morton C. Tuttle Co. of Boston, Mass.

5 DEAD, 4 SAVED IN WATER OVER WEEK-END

Five drownings and four rescues—two of the rescues under thrilling and spectacular circumstances, occurred in New England during the week-end.

William Brackett, sixteen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Brackett of Maynard, was drowned in Long Pond, Littleton, when his canoe tipped. In his struggle for life, he fought his way clear three times from Walter Jones, who attempted to rescue him. The body was recovered.

Archie Tessier, twenty-five years old, of Perkins street, Lowell, was drowned in an attempt to swim across the Merrimack river near the Aiken street bridge, Lowell.

Fred Peterson, thirty years old, a New Milford, Ct., farm hand, was drowned in the Housatonic River. He had been fishing from the bank of the river. His body was found in one foot of water.

Mack Lizzotte, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lizzotte, Waterville, Me., was drowned in the Messalonskee River while swimming. It is believed he was seized with cramps.

Michael Limerick, 28 years old, of No. 2310 Washington street, Roxbury, was drowned when he lost his balance and fell from off the upper deck of the fishing boat "Release" into Broad Sound, opposite Deer Island.

Patrolman Foster, of the Metropolitan District Police, thrilled the crowd on the Charles River Esplanade near Berkeley street, when he plunged, fully clothed, into the river to save Andrew Young, of No. 141 Chestnut street, West End, whose canoe had capsized. Young is employed at the Union Club Boathouse. He was taken to the Haymarket Relief Station and went home after treatment.

RUSSIAN STATES HOLD RIGHT TO SECEDE

An amendment adopted a few days ago was construed as preventing such action without consent of all the republics, but the official document shows this amendment was intended to prevent changes in the territory of any State without its consent, while any alterations of the right of secession should require consent of all members of the federation.

The Ukraine's mission to Czecho-Slovakia is to be closed and its functions will be taken over by a Russian federal mission there. In future none of the individual republics is to have representation abroad.

ROVING TURTLE "ARRESTED" BY COP

Braintree, July 8.—Night Desk Sergeant Harvey Annis of police headquarters "arrested" a snapping turtle measuring twelve by eighteen inches in the square at South Braintree and confined him for the night in a pan of water covered with a wire screen at headquarters.

The nearest places from which it is thought the turtle may have come are the Monatiquot River and Sunset Lake, each about 500 and 1,500 feet distant from the place where the "arrest" was made.

VICTIM'S PLEA SAVES FORGER FROM JAIL

Even more remarkable is the fact that McDonald, an ex-convict, escaped with a one-year suspended sentence.

"Dapper Dan," suave and popular in the bright light cafes three and four years back, served one year of a two-year sentence at Deer Island for stealing $12,000 from Amory and Samuel Elliot of State street in 1920.

Determined to "go straight" McDonald obtained employment and for months kept away from the temptations that first caused his ruin.

Recently he took to drink and while under the influence of synthetic gin passed three checks for $9.50, $7 and $7.50 upon Alex Stratolo of No. 35 Hale street, West End.

These were signed with the name of M. F. Driscoll, dealer in waste paper.

Today Driscoll appeared before Chief Justice Bolster in Municipal Court and urged leniency for the sake of McDonald's wife and child, and this the judge granted.

McDonald lived on Waterford street, Brighton.

CRIPPLE-KILLER NOW A CRIPPLE, ASKS PARDON

Aiello Lavalle of North Uxbridge, who is serving a four-years' term in Charlestown State Prison for running down and killing a cripple and then speeding away in his auto, today appealed to the State to release him from prison because he has himself become a cripple.

Lavalle lost two fingers of his right hand under a 350-pound stamping machine which he has been operating in the prison. It may be that a further operation will remove the remainder of the fingers on that hand.

Lavalle is 44. He was running bootleg whiskey from Woonsocket, R. I., to Springfield and ran down John Fell, an aged and crippled carpetworker in Palmer. Lavalle kept on going but was arrested several miles further along by police who recognized the broken headlamp of his auto.

Lavalle is married and has three children. His wife joins with him in the request for a pardon. The State Board of Parole recommends his release. A hearing will be held Wednesday. He has served two years and a half.

SOUTH BOSTON MAN INJURED IN CRASH

Burt Snyder of No. 48 East Eighth street, South Boston, is in a critical condition in the Newton Hospital, hiding a motorcycle through Wellesley he was thrown thirty feet today when he attempted to avoid a collision with an automobile at Central and Weston streets. His machine struck the curbing. Snyder is believed to have a fractured skull.

WILL PROSECUTE IN ARSON CASES

New York, July 9.—Dist. Atty Banton announced that he would investigate all suspicious fires in the next two months, in a crusade against "the man who burns for profit." A special bureau for the vigorous prosecution of arson cases and persons who file claims of false proof of loss, has been established, he said.

PAYS FINE OF $50 FOR EXPOSING BOOZE

Jim Donnely of No. 15 East Springfield street, South End, was fined $50 in Municipal Court today for keeping and exposing booze. He was arrested by the headquarters liquor squad. Sergeant Daniel Hines testified fifteen gallons of moonshine had been seized. Donnelly paid.

For a week we have dealt most carefully upon the plan for handling the large number of people without confusion.

If every mother and child will make a special point of being down to Rowe's Wharf in ample time to board the boats, with his or her Nantasket Steamboat Co. return trip ticket in his or her hand, there will be no trouble.

We have repeatedly said that the Boston American coupons, printed in the newspaper will NOT BE ACCEPTED OR EXCHANGED ON THE DOCK.

That ruling must be accepted as final.

All the tickets are out—in the hands of the exchange stations listed below. Take three coupons of three different dates to your nearest station and get them exchanged for steamboat tickets TODAY. Do not put it off till tomorrow.

Leoke over all the good things that are to be presented to our guests tomorrow:

3,000 BOTTLES OF MILK.

H. P. HOOD & SONS are giving 3,000 bottles of their wonderful, health-giving pasteurized Milk and also a big quantity of their famous Old-Fashioned Ice Cream.

BERWICK CAKE CO. has contributed 3,000 large portions of their celebrated Berwick Pound Cake. The children will remember the "Berwick Kiddies," Berry and Wyckie. Watch for them.

PARAGON PARK FREE.

PARAGON PARK is wide open tomorrow to all holders of Boston American indentification tags. Get your tag on the boat after leaving Boston, attach it to your clothing where it can be seen and when you get to Nantasket Beach, march into Paragon Park as if you owned it.

SAGAMORE BATH HOUSES will be prepared to furnish every mother and child with a bathing suit free and the courtesies of the bath houses. The manager has a warm place in his heart for kiddies and will personally attend to their wants.

PLENTY OF NOISE.

THE BALLOON MAN, Jean J. Quesly, New England representative of the great Pioneer Rubber Company of Willard, Ohio, has just dropped in to say that he will "come across" with twenty or thirty gross of their ear-destroying "squawkers." See that you get one. Mr. Quesly, while one of the busiest and ablest of salesmen, is also a lover of children. Which same has already been proven.

POLAR PATTIES.—If you never have eaten a Polar Patty, now is your first and biggest opportunity. The Polar Food Products Corp. of West Somerville is about to make each child on this excursion a friend for life.

MOXIE FAVORS.

ARCHER ON THE JOB as usual. Frank Archer of the Moxie Company never lets a chance slip by to make love to the kiddies. He has instructed his Giant to have a Moxie favor given on the dock for every passenger on our boats. And when "Moxie's Daddy" says that, IT IS DONE.

Now we are all set for tomorrow. Any child of 15 and younger. Any mother at all. Be sure to remember that every one MUST have a steamboat ticket. Even the smallest infant. That is very necessary.

The Boston American takes this opportunity of officially wishing its guests a beautiful day, plenty of fun enough to eat and BON VOYAGE, which is French for a pouch of a trip, in every respect.

WARNS FRENCH ARE RUINING EUROPE

London, July 9.—J. H. Thomas, labor member of Parliament, declared in a speech: "We are at the parting of the ways with France so far as European affairs are concerned. We must watch out for the future and forget the past. France has suffered but we cannot stand by and allow a continuance of a policy which is ruining France and Germany and leading to disaster for the world."

OWNER IN ROW, HIS DOG BITES SIX PERSONS

None of the six was involved in the row, but were merely passing by.

Miss Evelyn Durrett, twenty-one years old, No. 38 Melendy avenue, Watertown, was badly bitten in the calf of the leg. She was taken to the Cambridge Hospital, where ten stitches were taken.

Evelyn Duffett

Keghian Sarabian, seventeen years old, No. 19 Dexter street, Watertown, was bitten in the right leg. He was treated at home. Names of the four others were not learned.

The trouble began when one of two boys, throwing stones at each other, hurled a missile into the yard of Sam Arslanian. Believing the stone was intended for him, Arslanian rushed out into the street and began to uphold the boys.

Mrs. Arslanian then came out carrying the dog. Leaping from the woman's arms, the dog rushed into the midst of the crowd, snapping at and biting every person in its path.

The two boys, who were throwing stones, Arslanian, and his son, were all arrested for disturbing the peace. The dog was not believed to be ferocious. Its owner was as greatly surprised at the fierce attack of the dog as were those attacked.

BOY FALLS THROUGH SHED, MAN FROM A WINDOW

A man and a boy are at the City Hospital with injuries received in falls. Francis Stevens, 8 years old, of No. 45 Hecla street, Dorchester, while playing on the roof of a shed in the rear of his home, fell 12 feet to the ground. He suffered a lacerated scalp. Patrick Curran, 35 years old, of No. 1275 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, was repairing a window frame in his home when he lost his balance and fell 15 feet to the sidewalk. He was badly bruised and suffered possible internal injuries.

TURKS VICTORS IN NEAR EAST PEACE PACT

Lausanne, July 9 (A.P.).—Ismet Pasha has proved himself perhaps a greater diplomat than general, for by the Near Eastern peace arranged in principle between the Allied and Turkish representatives early this morning he achieved signal victories for his country.

"Peace. Peace. Tell it to the whole world."

These were the words of the Turkish leader to the correspondents as he emerged jubilant from the conference hall.

Turkey won a succession of victories and by the Lausanne treaty will achieve two results important in European history. In one sweep she obtains abolition of capitulations, a step which it took Japan long years to accomplish. In the second place, Turkey, by her reentry into Eastern Thrace, comes back into Europe.

France, especially on the question of the Ottoman debt made a sacrifice in order to hold fast Great Britain and Italy and to attain peace. As the pact now stands, it contains no reference to Turkey's debt, but the Allies will declare that the debt contract cannot be modified except by mutual agreement between Turkey and the French bondholders, with whom she must endeavor to negotiate a moratorium for the payment of interest.

Frank Archer Says:—

The late Dr. Augustin Thompson, the originator of Moxie, discovered through his enormous practice, the necessity of a beverage which could be used freely, one with true tonic qualities, a pure food and supreme thirst quencher and appetizer, healthful and refreshing, pure, harmless and absolutely free from any deleterious ingredients, to meet the wants of both young and old.

Many have said "When I first tasted Moxie I didn't like it. When I had taken one or two glasses, served ice cold, I found it to be delicious and satisfying, and it made me eat, sleep and feel better."

Moxie has been a household word for half a century. Its use in hospitals, homes, and soft drink places of all kinds, has been so enormous, and the results of its use so great, that it has placed Moxie on the highest pinnacle—in a class by itself.

It is not out of place to suggest that you should always have a few bottles of Moxie on ice in your home and at your place of business, and whether traveling or at the fountain you should make Moxie your drink as an insurance of your well-being. Its quality, deliciousness, uniformity and the results obtained from its use have the O. K. of millions upon millions of people.

LEGION HEAD TO VISIT BOSTON THURSDAY

Col. Alvin Mansfield Owsley, National commander of the American Legion, who officially committed the Legion as in favor of President Harding's plan for American entrance into the World Court, will visit Boston Thursday in his tour of American Legion posts throughout the country.

En tour, Col Owsley has outlined the platform of the Legion as favoring not only the World Court, but also the exclusion of immigrants for five years and an intense Americanization program.

FOR WORLD PEACE.

"Let no man say this American Legion has not inaugurated a great movement for world peace," he said in an address at Sioux Falls, S. D. "We have the honor of seeing the present administration adopt the Legion's idea of a world court plan. There must in the end be some such tribunal, and Americans cannot fail to see the fallacy of appealing to war for the vindication of international justice. I hope with all my heart for the time when there shall be some such tribunal

LEAVE OWN COUNTRY.

"When did it become a moral privilege for a man to leave his country when that country never needed him as it does now?

"Let them remain at home and work a while longer for their home country, so those countries may be enabled to pay their debts to America."

Colonel Owsley will be the guest of Lowell Post No. 87, American Legion, of which Captain Joseph A. Moller is commander. He will go to New York from Boston, having completed a tour of the larger New England cities.

10,000,000 FACING FAMINE IN RUHR

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Berlin, July 9.—Ten million people in the Ruhr are threatened with a food catastrophe of inconceivable dimensions in the near future as a result of the new "hunger blockade" imposed by the French and Belgian military authorities.

This prediction is made by the District President, Dr. Gruetzner, in an appeal made to the Papal Delegate, Monsignor Testa, begging him to use his influence to avert this disaster.

LOVE OF GIRL URGES HIM TO KILL HERMIT

Bridgeport, Ct., July 9.—John Dondone, Topstone farm hand, arrested Friday by State police on suspicion of the murder of George Holtz, broke down under a severe grilling and confessed he killed the aged hermit at Topstone Station, the police say.

Urged by love for a girl recently landed on these shores from his native land, Dondone admitted robbing the lifeless body of Holtz and throwing it into Umpawaug Lake.

JEWISH EDITOR SUES HENRY FORD

New York, July 9.—Samuel Untermyer has been retained to prosecute a suit against Henry Ford by Herman Bernstein, editor of the Jewish Tribune. It became known today when a letter from Mr. Bernstein to the manufacturer was made public.

The suit was based on alleged attacks against Mr. Bernstein in connection with a series of articles on the Jews published in Mr. Ford's Dearborn Independent.

RACE FOR LOVE OF ASTOR HEIRESS

New York, July 9.—The battle for the heart of Alice Muriel Astor, daughter of the late John Jacob Astor, is on.

Miss Astor always was attractive, and when she raced over the 21-years-old line Saturday she came into complete possession of the $7,000,000 trust fund left to her by her father, who died in the Titanic disaster.

Attractiveness plus huge wealth means matrimony. New York society believes, and already it is beginning to ask "who'll be the lucky man?"

Lady Ribbedale of England, Miss Astor's mother, is said to be planning to capture at least a continental title for her daughter, perhaps a British one.

Will Miss Astor surrender to the lure of pomp and come back to America to seek a Yankee husband?

Society here is not convinced that the path to the heart of the charming heiress is closed to an American.

They remember the long list of noblemen whose names have been mentioned in a matrimonial sense with hers, but also point to the attentions she received not so long ago from a young naval officer.

Matrimonial Prize

ALICE MURIEL ASTOR

Daughter of late John Jacob Astor, who has just come into $5,000,000 birthright. She is now regarded as a matrimonial prize on both sides of the Atlantic.

NEW YORK LEGION TO MEET IN SEPTEMBER

Albany, July 9.—A tentative program for the American Legion Convention, Department of New York, to be held at Saratoga Springs September 13, 14 and 15, was outlined here at a recent meeting of war veterans.

PASTOR SLAIN IN FEUD STARTED BY EMBRACE

Cumberland Court House, Va., July 9.—One little kiss has fired a feud here in which one man, Rev. E. S. Pierce, Baptist minister, is dead, two are charged with murder, and the town is under a reign of hate and terrorism.

Larkin Garrett and R. O. Garrett, brothers, are charged with shooting the minister to death as the culmination of a quarrel over the guilt or innocence of a young school teacher caught in her sweetheart's arms in an innocent embrace during the recess hour.

The "scandal" finally reached the school board, of which Larkin Garrett is a member. At a meeting when only Garrett and one other member were present it was voted to ask the teacher's resignation. Later she was discharged by the full board.

A large group of citizens, headed by Rev. Mr. Pierce, protested to the electoral board, which reversed the school board's decision and reinstated the teacher.

The victory infuriated the Garrett adherents. At the school commencement, Rev. Mr. Pierce, delivering the invocation, mentioned the name of Garretts. Next day he was found dead, shot through the chest.

YOUNG WIFE LEAPS FROM 4TH STORY

Mrs. Cora May Dying in Hospital; Friends Blame Actor-Husband's Jealousy

In a plunge from a window on the front of the Hotel Ritz, Columbus avenue, to the low roof of the Rathskeller, Mrs. Cora May, young wife of an actor, today received injuries which will probably cause her death.

No one saw whether she leaped or fell from her fourth-story window, or was pushed out while engaged in a struggle with another person. Her husband said he was out at the time.

Officers learned from her husband, Irving May, and from friends that unreasoning jealousy of May probably caused her to try suicide.

Mrs. May was twenty-one years old and was soon to become a mother. As passers-by and hotel employes ran to pick her up, she came to. To Ted Whitcomb, show manager, who in his fourth-floor room heard her strike the projection she murmured:

"Where is my husband? I thought he was leaving me."

She was taken to City Hospital where she is semi-conscious and suffering from multiple contusions of head, body and limbs, a possible fractured skull, lacerations and possibly internal injuries.

The young wife was married about a year ago. She was Miss Cora Kelly of Maynard and lived for a time after her marriage in Marlboro, Revere and at Boston hotels.

Geo. Gould's Widow

GOULD WIDOW TO REAR SON IN AMERICA

New York, July 9.—"My children?" Mrs. Guinevere Sinclair Gould's luminous gray eyes opened wide with the loveliness of surprise. "Why, of course, I am going to rear them in this country as citizens of America.

"They are the children of a great American, and it is my dearest wish, as their characters unfold, to see them develop into the sort of American their father was. Mr. Gould was the most wonderful man I ever knew."

MYSTERY UNVEILED.

A lonely but plucky woman, the beautiful young widow of George J. Gould, was speaking to the public for the first time. Her words, her manner, her personality cast off the mantle of mystery that had been wrapped about her since her marriage to Mr. Gould in May, 1922.

Nine years before, at a London tea party, Guinevere Sinclair, daughter of a distinguished Scottish Irish family, had been casually introduced to two American world travelers—Anthony Drexel and George J. Gould. Then began a romance that touched the hearts of the few intimates of George Gould and Miss Sinclair and culminated in the marriage of the devoted couple.

"My children are going to be permitted to follow their natural bent, no matter what that is. George and the oldest of my two girls speak French perfectly. Last year, at Cap Martin, George went to school. He liked it, too.

"I haven't decided where to continue his studies this fall. In a year I suppose, I shall have to send him to boarding school. I am a great believer in the developing power of the 'away from home' school, although it will be a terrible wrench not to have my little boy about the house.

"Little George was such a help and comfort to me this year during the terrible months of my husband's illness.

"And when the fight was over, and we had lost, my son came to me: 'Mother, you are poor now, aren't you?' he said. 'You may have to work to take care of us?'

"'Yes, dear,' I said, 'I may.'

"He pattered away and in a moment returned with two francs and pressed them upon me. That is the sort of a boy I have."

IS TREMONT TEMPLE PREACHER

Stepped on "Gas" in New York Town; Intends to Do It Here in Sermons

The Rev. John W. Ham of Atlanta, Ga., is here to break all speed records in the matter of high-power, six-cylinder evangelism. During July the Rev. Mr. Ham will preach the Sunday sermons at Tremont Temple. On his way here from Atlanta he was pinched for speeding.

He admitted today that he stepped on the gas. He expects to step on the gas some more during the three weeks he preaches from the Tremont pulpit.

He made the trip here from Atlanta—1,475 miles—in a flivver, and got here on schedule time for his opening sermon, despite the speed cop.

REACHED PORTCHESTER

"When my party got into Portchester, having a little more time than the schedule, we took the main street. We thought we would give the place a little once over on our way. About ten yards up I noticed a gap and with the liberal spirit of a driver I went ahead and filled it in. No sooner had I put my car in gears when the biggest, bullest-looking officer on the cutest little motorcycle making him the most incongruous spectacle, yelled to me, and when he came nearer bellowed: 'Who do you think you are. This ain't no farm.'

"Something new for a Northerner I thought, but like a gentleman I explained to him my position and why I was driving to make time. Do you think it made an iota of difference to him whether or not I had to preach a sermon in Tremont Temple in Boston at a certain time. 'Come on,' he said, 'you can't pull that stuff on me. I've met you kind and heard that before. Get something new.'

HAD NO LICENSE.

"When he told me I had to face the music I told him to 'drive me to the barn.' In he hopped and away we went to that home of 'money extortion'. Gee, I thought Portchester was a hot skeleton of a place, but when I saw the judge, I was sure of it. Before he even looked up to see if I was a beggar —a prince, he exclaimed, 'Reckless driving, eh!' You know just that caring tone which sends a shiver up your spine even on a hot day. 'Let me see your license,' he demanded.

"Well, I didn't have a license and told him so. I showed him the affidavit the Secretary of State of Georgia had given me that I owned the car I was driving, but that didn't help matters. I sort of frowned with him like a man. 'Can't you make the charge speeding? Why am I here for reckless driving. Surely I wasn't under the influence of liquor and certainly I know how to drive. Surely you can't mean that, judge.'

"Yes, that's just what I mean,' he echoed. 'Driving in such a manner as to endanger the lives of pedestrians.'

"I just had to laugh at him. That was a good joke.

JUDGE OBDURATE.

"'Can't you make it speeding, judge?' I asked.

"'Speeding is only a human offence, but reckless driving—well I just didn't like it, I saw no reason why I should be so charged and I just told the judge so. But after that marble-faced individual told me I drove one-eighth of a mile out on the side of another car and that that was enough to charge me with inability to drive a machine, I realized that Portchester was no place for me and the sooner I left town the better.

"Instructed that I was to put up a bond for $10 and appear in court, I gave the money to him instead. After I paid for my lessons I spoke up and just told the judge what I thought of him and his jurisdiction and what a hectic place his town was.

"How he lied to me, telling me that when I got to Connecticut and committed the same offense I would be fined $24.60 and court costs. With a merry goodbye I wished the judge all the luck in the world and journeyed on my way, speeding all the more to make up for past forfeiture.

CONNECTICUT ALL RIGHT.

"When I got to Connecticut I decided to find out just how much truth there was in his statement about the traffic. I spoke to a taxi man who told me the judge was a liar. I believed him, in fact, I knew he was a liar long ago. But you can't always take a taxi man's word and so I got hold of an officer who characterized the judge very much the same, telling me to go the limit to make up schedule. That was good news and I certainly took advantage of it.

"You can rest assured that on my way back, I'll leave Portchester off my list. They have my $10 and my name on record with a nasty offense. Well if that's the way they keep their town going I'd donate a little more."

Still a very young man, Dr. Ham has traveled all over the globe, representing all kinds and sorts of evangelistic conventions and meetings, World Sunday Schools associations, Baptist organizations and the like. In Atlanta, he is the pastor of a church that seats 2,000 and holds 5,000, and has a choir of 125 voices.

MINISTER HELD UP AS "RECKLESS DRIVER"

SCOFFS AT PORTCHESTER JUDGE

Rev. John W. Ham, the auto in which he traveled 1,475 miles from Atlanta, Ga., to preach in Tremont Temple, and two fair members of the party that greeted him here after his exciting experience in Portchester, N. Y., where he was arrested on a charge of reckless driving and pleaded in vain to have the judge change the charge to one of speeding.

INDIAN PATH BLOCKED BY WOMAN

"It's Mine!" Says Mrs. Kurinsky, Guarding Lane With Daughter

Mrs. Rebecca Kurinsky of Malden doesn't know a lot about the early history and ancient traditions of the city where, since her arrival, she has acquired considerable property—nor does she care a hoot.

But, about titles and deeds and things. That's a different proposition.

"So, "Becky," as the Malden police and neighbors know her best, is stoutly defending against inroads of strangers the old Indian trail known for centuries as Pierpont Lane, a narrow strip of wood-fringed roadway, connecting Broadway, Malden, with the Newburyport turnpike. "Becky" claims it's hers.

IN ALL-NIGHT VIGIL.

Behind a barricade of stones, with her daughter Rose and her faithful collie, "Smitzer," police summoned by irate neighbors who use the lane as a short cut, found "Becky" solidly entrenched after an all-night vigil.

"It's mine. I bought it with land alongside and I intend to keep off trespassers," was Mrs. Kurinsky's defi to the arm of the law. Police officials have decided that "Becky's" right—perhaps.

City Solicitor Harvey L. Boutwell says that those who don't like it must go to court and test "Becky's" title to the land.

"I don't carew hether it's an Indian trail or just a cowpath. It's mine and I going to hold," says "Becky."

GIRL TO TAKE BROKER AS HER THIRD HUBBY

Her lawyers have brought her matrimonial difficulties with her two husbands, one a radio dealer and the other a scion of an illustrious and wealthy family with an income of $40,000, to a point where she will soon be free to marry the man she loves, a broker with an income of $100,000.

Today she expects the annulment of her marriage to the wealthy Ralph Graham Kretschmar, whom she married last March while she was still the wife of Roy Alfred Mayo, radio dealer.

And she is not afraid of a bigamy action, Mayo, she says, would not make such a charge on account of their child.

Dismissing Kretschmar and Mayo without more ado, Mrs. Mayo settled back comfortably and her face brightened with pleasure as she told of the subject nearest her heart, her fiance. She said:

"Just as soon as the trouble of the annulment of Mr. Kretschmar blows over and is forgotten, as it will be in a short time, and just as soon as I can get my divorce from Mr. Mayo, I am going to marry the man I really love and be happy for the rest of my life.

"The man I am going to marry is a well-known broker. He has an income of $100,000 a year. As for Kretschmar, he had only $40,000 a year.

TURKS CONDEMN 17 GREEKS TO BE SHOT

Constantinople, July 9.—Turkish courts-martial have condemned seventeen Greeks from the village of Beicos, on the Asiatic bank of the Bosphorus, to death for making a compact with Greek troops during the time the troops were in Beicos. The condemned Greeks have been sent to Izmid for execution.

FASCISTI BATTLE REDS IN FLORENCE

EAST BOSTON WANTS OLD LINE KEPT

The announcement of the Boston Elevated trustees that service is to be discontinued on the Lexington street line has aroused East Boston and in its churches, its unions and by special mass meetings and petitions, the district has voiced a mammoth protest against the action of the trustees.

The trustees, under a special act of the Legislature in 1918, which gave them absolute authority in the matter of track locations and fares, decided to discontinue service on Lexington street Wednesday.

5,000 SIGN PETITION.

More than 1,000 persons attended a protest meeting in Music Hall, Meridian street, and voted unanimously against the proposed discontinuance of street car service, and a committee was named to attend the meeting of the trustees of the Boston Elevated Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock, at which will be presented a petition against the proposed action, signed by 5,000 residents of East Boston.

The Rev. Kenneth Danskin of the Maverick Church and the Rev. W. D. Swaffield of the Trenton Street Church asked those members of their congregations who are opposed to the measure to stand. Both congregations stood without division against removal of cars from the hill section.

The present action, it is stated, is only the first step in the Elevated plan to discontinue service also on Bennington street and to install the tracks on Chelsea street as soon as the new Maverick street tunnel station is completed.

A mass meeting is announced for tonight in the East Boston High School Hall at Marion and Saratoga streets.

Because of the protests and petitions, Manager Dana will keep the Lexington street line in operation pending the action of the Elevated trustees Wednesday morning.

POSTOFFICE BREAK LAID TO THREE BOYS

Three Mt. Hope boys, two eight years old and the other nine, were arrested charged with breaking and entering the United States postoffice at Roslindale. According to the police, the lads admit several other recent breaks in the neighborhood.

GEN. EDWARDS' AIDE TO WED SATURDAY

Cincinnati, July 9.—The marriage of Miss Louise Ewan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Verner Ewan of Wallace place, Covington, Ky., to Lt. Baldwin Nichols of New Haven, Ct., will be solemnized on Saturday at the home of the bride's parents. Lt. Nichols, who has been with Gen. Edwards in Boston for the last two years, has recently been transferred from Boston to Panama, where he will take his bride.

ROXBURY GIRL AND F. J. TYNER MARRIED

Francis J. Tyner of No. 32 Winthrop street, Roxbury, recently acquitted by a jury after indictment charging him with being accessory after the fact in the robbery of the paymaster of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, was married very unostentatiously to Miss Julia Sullivan of No. 237 Highland avenue, Roxbury.

BOY SCOUTS' COUNCIL OPENS CONVENTION

Bear Mountain, N. Y., July 9.—The 13th annual meeting of the National Council of Boy Scouts was convened today with 200 delegates in attendance. The principal event was a luncheon with Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, scheduled as the principal speaker. Sessions will continue through tomorrow.

TRAFFIC IS TIED UP BY WEBSTER WRECK

Two freight cars on a Boston-bound train were derailed, tying up traffic several hours on the line of the New Haven & Hartford Railroad between North Webster and Worcester. Both cars were badly damaged. A wrecking crew is being sent from Worcester to clear the track.

TRIED FOR MURDER AS LYNCHING SEQUEL

Columbia, Mo., July 9.—George Parkwell, Columbia contractor, today faces trial for murder in connection with the lynching of James Scott, University of Missouri janitor, who was hanged after he was charged with attacking a girl. Four others charged with minor offenses in connection with the death of the negro also are to be tried during the present term of court.

TINY PLANE CRASHES INTO BERLIN CROWD

Berlin, July 9.—One of the new "flivver planes," weighing 400 pounds, crashed several hundred feet downward above the throng of people on Unter Den Linden, fighting itself, it landed without serious mishap to crowd or machine, narrowly evading crashing into the historic German palace.

TRIAL MARRIAGE IN WOODS IS BROKEN UP

Rochester, N. Y., July 9.—The Garland reveal has spread.

Today an eighteen-year-old husband and father is awaiting trial here following his arrest with a Concord, N. H., young married woman with whom he was experimenting a "trial marriage" in the woods.

They were living with the girl's young son in the crudest fashion possible, sleeping on mother earth rolled in blankets. They risked starvation for their belief, not having eaten in three days, when police invaded their love nest.

The man is Fred Raymond. He left his wife Lillian and their baby with her permission, he said, to live three months with Mrs. Elsie Moulton, 25, of Concord, N. H. She has a husband in New England. Her son, Robert, six, was so emaciated from lack of nourishment when police arrived that he is in a hospital. The mother, too, is under the care of physicians.

Their bodies cried for nourishment, Raymond told police. So leaving the rude tent, made of a carpet, he had suspended over the low hung limb of a tree he staggered forth for food. He returned to the mate empty of hand just as the police came in. Now Mrs. Moulton wants to go back to her husband in New England. The trial marriage she says was a failure.

"If it was," said Mrs. Raymond, "the fault was hers, not Freddy's. He had better come back to me. I still love him."

TELEGRAPHERS TO HAVE BOSTON BANK

Labor is to have a national bank in Boston within the next twelve months. The new savings institution will either be an individual bank, owned and controlled by the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, or a branch of the Telegraphers' National Bank of St. Louis. This was decided upon at a conference at the American House.

BOY, 10, HIKES FROM BROCKTON TO HUB

Kenneth Cram, ten years old, of No. 595 North Main street, in the Campello section of Brockton, desiring to see his mother, whom he thought was staying in Somerville, walked the entire distance from Brockton to Boston in vain. When he reached here he did not know the address of his mother, and after being questioned by the police was taken to the South Station and given his ticket back to Brockton.

CARMANIA LANDS 325 IMMIGRANTS

The Cunard Line steamship Carmania docked at East Boston bringing 325 passengers, mostly of Scandinavian birth, for this port. More than 700 will be landed at New York, for which port the liner leaves today.

The liner Presidente Wilson stopped to take on passengers at Commonwealth Pier, arriving from New York, and establishing a direct service to Mediterranean ports.

HELD FOR ATTACK ON AGED LAWRENCE MAN

Lawrence, July 9.—The police of North Andover placed Etienne Dubois under arrest at his camp on Chestnut street, charging him with assault. According to a complaint made by Henri Dubois, seventy-two years old, the prisoner is the man who attacked and beat him with a club last Thursday. Dubois will be arraigned today.

BONFIRE BURNS WORCESTER BOY

Worcester, July 9.—Peter Alex, six years old, of Ledge street, was severely burned while playing about a bonfire he had started. His blouse caught fire and he ran screaming towards his home. A companion tore the blouse from him preventing more serious burns. He was treated at the City Hospital.

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

A Splendid Sequel to the Famous Story of Wedded Life, "When a Girl Marries"

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jeanie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents. Evvy helps Anne arrange her apartments and a dinner is given as a housewarming. Phoebe grows hysterical on receipt of Carlotta's wedding invitation. Betty speaks to Anne about Ralph's fondness for the latter.

By Ann Lisle

"ANNE, I want you to over-look a lot of things I said about her—and come to tea with Ruth Gregory and me today."

"Have you forgotten our lunch-son with Rosa?" Boddington—," I began a little stiffly, remembering how Betty had exposed herself from introducing me to her temperamental and celebrated friend.

"Please, Anne," Betty said earnestly. "There's plenty of time before lunch and tea. And—I want you to know Ruth. I want her to know you—now that you are—how—loverlike. Please! I've a reason for asking."

"What is it?" I asked more carelessly than curiously.

"Oh, because you're both so dear to me. I want my two best women friends to know and appreciate each other. You were refused me. You're too generous for that."

"I cannot disclaim your mind of its impression," I laughed in a stately fashion. "I must permit you to go on considering me an angel."

"So you'll go to Ruth's for tea?" demanded Betty, her voice filling as if something important had been accomplished. "The party's been announced and—it's—it's—a—a—tea with Ruth!"

"Oh, do we go to tea with the great Miss Gregory?" cried Rosa's voice from the doorway. "How nice! That is just what I would like! The tea is the climax in the invitation for this is for me a privilege to be now giving you."

A Weak Answer

Betty and I looked at each other in chagrin. The door was ajar, and so Rosa, coming in to call for me, had heard Betty's statement. And the situation was too much for Betty. Even her savior face was powerless to meet the impertinence with which Rosa included herself in the tea.

"Have you made positive the appointment with my neighbor, Miss Gregory?" insisted Rosa, hammering home the point.

"I said I'd try to arrange it," said Betty lamely.

"Now it is arranged," cried Rosa in a tone of satisfaction far greater than the suggestion seemed to justify.

And all through lunch she was a charming hostess—more charming than I've ever before known her to be. Somehow she made me think of a cat playing with a mouse and doing it gracefully.

There was no escaping the business I'd called off the appointment. This I was strangely loath to do. And Rosa might have insisted on going any way.

It was, therefore, with feelings of elation and chagrin strangely mingled that I followed Betty down the hall leading to the studio where Ruth Gregory lived. And when Betty lifted the great ornate knocker on the door my heart seemed to be knocking also.

The door opened slowly. A little Japanese maid stood bowing in the threshold. And beyond her was a tall, rangy woman with ugly hair and a pencil behind one ear. She was pointing away furiously to the last moments of clear white daylight.

Strangely I had a moment of panic. For this woman who refused to recognize my existence was the ugly beauty. I'd seen so many times before.

Lingered a Moment

My "Ugly Beauty" stood in her own studio and resisted as the great artist, Ruth Gregory, was an even more strangely arresting figure than she'd been in the canvases which had claimed all the attention of three men, and made her pretty little companion a nullity.

Betty, Rosa and I lingered a moment in the doorway. Miss Gregory calmly went on painting, and did not give any sign of knowing we'd arrived.

"Well, Satsuma-San, evidently I'm to be the hostess, so we'll come in," laughed Betty, a trifle uneasily.

The little figure bowed gravely and stepped aside. Betty led us in and to a corner nook of the studio. The painter went on working as intently as if the great room were twenty-five feet wide.

"She hoards the last flicker of white light," explained Betty, a trifle awkwardly. "Painters must. We'll take off our things and then creep over and watch her if you like."

I didn't like. My mind was a chaos of impressions. Again I heard Ruth Gregory planning to spend the week-end in Springdale at the foot of the mountains, because it was within two hours of the city. I lived through the moment when I'd see Jim and a young familiar figure in a taxi that careened on one wheel around a corner and disappeared. Pat and I drove away from Nell's on the day Phoebe's baby was born. Jim's sudden trip to Springdale on "business," after he'd been unable to plan a week-end with me lashed at my memory.

ABOUT YOUR BEAUTY

By Maria Jeritza

DO you clean your nails and press back their cuticle at their base each time you wash your hands? If you do this carefully you have solved the problem of well-groomed, attractive finger-nails.

For when nails receive this half-minute of care several times a day, it becomes an easy matter to shape them each morning with a nail-file in a minute's time and to go over them with greater care once or twice a week.

After you have soaked your nails in olive oil for two or three minutes, you should have no difficulty in pressing back the cuticle and removing the dirt beneath the nail with an orange-stick wrapped in absorbent cotton. An orange-wood stick is the preferred instrument for this purpose because orange wood is so soft that it is not likely to bruise or scratch.

Always shape your nails with your file before, rather than after you immerse them in oil or water. Shape them in a slight point or the oval shape of a filbert nut, whichever appeals to your taste. But do not let them grow too long to look natural, nor cut them shorter than the tips of your fingers.

As a final touch to the dainty grooming of your hands you may like to apply to each nail a bit of the following mixture, which you can easily compound at home:

Oil of bergamot, 12 drops.

With your nail buffer—some women like to use the palms of their hands instead—rub this well into each nail until a delicate, rosy glow proves that your nails are perfectly groomed and in the "pink" of condition. And never forget the half-minute care due your nails each time you bathe your hands!

THE HE MAN

SHE FLEW WITH HIM TO THE JUNGLE

By George Agnew Chamberlain

"I think," said Trevor hastily, "you had better sit here—for a change." He drew out a straight-backed chair by the table. She cast him an inquiring glance but sat down without remark.

Trevor did not sit down; he paced up and down before her till she could stand it no longer, then she said brightly, "Now I know how our old cat used to feel, watching the canary swing on the trapeze."

Both Pondered

Both pondered on this rejoinder for some moments; then it was something about it that reminded Andrea of "first blood." Finally she realized that it was her turn to speak. "I'll let that go for the present," she said with dignity. "Suppose you say what you've got to say."

The man stepped squarely before her. "All right," he said. For a second he hung on the verge of further speech as though he were counting: "one, two, three,—go"; then he plunged; "Will you marry me?"

Here was a game that Andrea knew from its infancy to its old age. It was like the draughts of childhood. The first move on its checker-board was as fixed as it was easy. "No," she said promptly and automatically and glanced up with a half-bored look that said, "Your turn—play."

That look was destined to die a sudden death. "Thank God," said Trevor fervently, apparently looking into space but in reality taking in her galvanized start through the corner of one eye. "You see," he continued, "I've come to my senses and begun to get your point of view. It's still true that you asked me to bring you but it's no less true that you thought you were going up for a morning breeze, while I knew that once you were in that flying-machine it was good-by to a world. If I'd told you that, of course you wouldn't have come."

"Of course," said Andrea faintly. Her heart was aching and inside of her its pulse was drumming an old familiar childish refrain of helpless rage. "He didn't play fair! He didn't play fair!"

"Under the circumstances and acknowledging my fault, I could do no less than offer to marry you in spite of your high station in life. I felt that you might think yourself compromised to such an extent that even my humble person would prove some sort of an amend. It's a great relief to know that I ever estimated the situation all around."

Andrea realized that the faint start had thrown her out of the normal stride of the game and she was ready to clutch at a straw. "Why, I hadn't thought of that—I mean, I'd forgotten it somehow—but I do feel compromised,—awfully," she looked hopefully at his face.

"No need to," said Trevor briskly. "I've got these three missionary chaps here for witnesses to the fact that we went up in perfectly good faith, that I was forced to a bad landing and got fearfully cut up and burned and that I was only just buckling out of death's door when they turned up and found you intact."

Awful Lie

"Why, White Man!" exclaimed Andrea, "how could you get them to tell that awful lie?"

"Easily," answered Trevor with promptness. "They wouldn't know it was a lie. You see, these missionary chaps will still believe a native; they can't afford to concede the immutable fact that a black constitutionally may only once in constant effort in his life,—an effort to give always the answer that he thinks it will please you most to hear. Why, I don't even have to fix it up with my people. You'd believe the lie yourself if you could understand half they will say."

Andrea's lips drooped and she shook her head. "No," she said slowly. "No, I wouldn't." She was sitting with her elbows on the table, her cheek against the back of one hand, and both her eyes following the white man's nervous movements with a sort of wounded wonder.

"So, you see we can fix it," he concluded. "These clergymen are the only people in this back country that I could have trusted you with and who will strike just the right family note in your precious world-of-the-things-that-aren't-done you-know. I have worked my best for you. I've made them come a hundred miles through country they have always thought impassable."

Andrea sat back and let her hands fall to her lap; for a moment she bowed her head and looked down at them, then she raised her gaze to her face. Her own, while it had been half-hidden, had suddenly lost its look of exuberant youth. It was so pale that her eyes seemed too large for it. They dimmed its outlines.

"White Man," she said, "do you mean it?"

"Mean what?"

"I have seen you kill beasts and men," said Andrea, "but even so, I couldn't have believed it of you." Her voice grew dulled, like water running over silken moss. "I couldn't have believed that you would hurt me so!" She cast her arms out across the table and then dropped her face upon them.

TELL IT AT DINNER

Hughes was bringing a friend home to dinner, and he was simply beaming with pride as he walked with his friend from the railway station and pointed out all the local landmarks on the way.

As they approached the Maloon Hughes, Tommy—Hughes's son and heir—came running out to meet his father.

"Ah, here comes the finest youngster in the world to meet his dad!" Hughes exclaimed, and extended his arms to greet the lad.

"He certainly is a bright little fellow," the friend admitted.

W. L. George and His Wife

ACROSS THE BREAKFAST TABLE

Moonlight Picnics

MR. GEORGE: I say, darling, what about tonight? You're coming to the moonlight picnic, of course? Jane and her husband are awfully clever at getting up those little shows, and I love them. There's something about a moonlight picnic that brings out what you choose to call my sentimental side; everything seems so romantic in the loneliness of the night, when the moon hangs like a fiery pan and when there are no flies. For some reason nature is more beautiful at night; I expect that the moonlight picnic was really invented by the Greeks.

MRS. GEORGE (sensibly): Don't be silly. Moonlight picnics make you think of the Greeks! I'll tell you what they make you think of. They make you think of how you can flirt with the pretty girl Jane has staying with her, or with Jane, or with Mamie, or with any or with all the pretty girls who may turn up. Moonlight picnics are looked upon by men as occasions for unlimited love-making. I don't know why, but just because there's no daylight, or because one's in the open air, every man seems to think he has a right to hold your hand. I don't believe in this moonlight madness, and if I had a grown-up daughter I certainly shouldn't allow her to go.

MR. GEORGE: It's good for her that you haven't a grown-up daughter to bring up in a glass case. As for me, I repel your insinuations. You know perfectly well that I wouldn't flirt with anybody in your presence; and I said a moonlight picnic, not a moonless night picnic. What you don't seem to understand is that the night lifts the tetters of the day. One is released, one is unconvensional, at least everybody is except you. And, by the way, dear, how is it you are so sure that somebody will try to hold your hand? Who knows? You may be out of luck.

EVERYDAY MISTAKES

In Speaking—

Wrong.
"You done well."

Right.
"You have done well, or "You did well is the proper form. "Done" is the past participle and requires an auxiliary to form the past tense.

Wrong.

Right.
"Of" is unnecessary, say "I tasted the soup."

Wrong.
"Parent" pronounced "parrent."

Right.
"Parent" is pronounced pay-rent (the "a" long as in "mate") rent, with the accent on the first syllable.

Wrong.
"Aspirant" accented on the first syllable.

Right.
According to the best authorities "aspirant" is accented on the second syllable, the "a" as in "fat"—pir ("i" as in "fire")-ant.

Silmerine Makes the Curl Stay in Your Hair

The Silmerine method is unusually popular for bobbed hair and shingled girls. This is largely due to the warm weather and because women are now spending so much time out of doors. This simple method not only produces the loveliest, natural looking curls and waves, but keeps the hair in curl no matter how hot or damp it may be, nor how hard the wind blows. All one need do is to put a clean tooth brush with Liquid Silmerine, draw this through the hair before doing it up, and the hair will stay in just the greatest waves and ringlets. This also keeps the hair beautifully soft, silky, lustrous. A few ounces of Liquid Silmerine will last for months. Costs not over 30 cents an ounce.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"Last but not least."

"The sweet solace of toil."

"Hand and glove."

When two persons act with perfect accord in a matter, and we say they are "hand and glove" we use a phrase from Cowper's "Table Talk."

"Marriage is a desperate thing."

Everyone will not agree with this dictum of the English jurist, John Selden, who wrote this in his essay on "Marriage."

BAD DAY TO RISK CASH

AN anxious and disappointing day may be read from the prevailing hair as well as mutual specks, all of which are adversely posted. It may be difficult to make much progress, either in the employment of others or in business, as both may be under hostile and hazardous influence.

There may be danger of losing positions and money, also the health may prove a matter of concern. Avoid all manner of risk. There is some good augury for future change or travel.

Those whose birthday it is should be careful to safeguard their comfort and their business, as these may be under unfriendly influences.

FLAMING YOUTH By WARNER FABIAN

START THIS BIG, NEW STORY TODAY

Mona Fentriss, young, beautiful and the wife of a consulting engineer, has been told by her physician, Bob Osterhout, who is in love with her, that she has only a short time to live. Mona gives a gay party, telling Pat to go to bed, but the latter borrows a sister's dress, steals downstairs and has "a taste of life." Connie goes to a dance at the club and takes too much punch. She is brought home by Fred Browning, with whom she had uneventfully spent the night. Sel Thorpe gives Pat a "real" kiss. Mona dies and Constance receives a call from Cary Scott, her mother's first admirer. Scott is much taken with Pat. A party is planned for the Dangerfields to christen the new swimming pool. A thunder storm puts out the lights and the guests go into the water without clothes. Dee modestly hesitates on the balcony and then—the lights came on, revealing her in a blinding glare. One of the bathers is saved from drowning by Larry Scott. Pat and Cary Scott become interested in each other. Pat returns from school and declares she is "out for trouble" this time. Scott and Pat confess their love and Scott, whose wife is living, says good-by to her.

NOW GO ON WITH THIS ENTHRALLING STORY.

"Dee, is it his baby?" asked Pat

"I MARRIED Jim under a private agreement. We were to live together for a month, and after that if either of us wanted to quit we were just to say so and stop being husband and wife without any legal separation or any fuss of that sort. The house is big enough for two separate lives."

"No house is," denied the sapient Pat. "I don't know much about marriage, but I know that much. It's a fool arrangement."

"I thought it would be a clever sort of trial marriage. Trial marriage"—Dee gave a short and bitter laugh—"doesn't work out so well after the ceremony. If a girl is going to experiment, she might better make her experiments before— Oh, damn it, Pat! I don't mean it. I think I've gone crazy mooning over this thing."

"What was wrong? Wouldn't Jimmie keep to his part of the agreement?"

"No."

"Runs sport," pronounced Pat. "And he knew you wanted to quit?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

Dee's body writhed under its loose covering. "I can't explain."

"Has it got something to do with—with the other man?"

"What other man?"

It was not like Dee to fence, Pat reflected. She persisted: "The one you told me about."

"I never told you about any man."

"Oh, well! You talked about that thrill stuff——"

"Don't!" gasped Dee.

"I'm sorry," said Pat in swift contrition. "Is it as bad as that? Then I suppose it is the angel-face on skates."

The hard lines melted out of Dee's face. "Yes," she whispered. She seemed to find relief in the admission.

"If it were, I'd want to have it," was the low, vehement response. "I'd be proud to have it."

"Is it Jimmie's, then?"

"Yes; it's Jim's."

"You say that," marvelled Pat, "as if you were ashamed of it."

"I am. God knows I am!" She bowed her proudly set head in her hands and rocked it to and fro. "Pat, there's nothing so rotten and shameful in the world as marrying a man you don't love."

"No. And he never will know, what's more."

"You're going to get out of it? You're going to one of those people in the newspaper?"

"Yes."

"Isn't it terribly dangerous?"

"What do I care if it is?"

"Dee, why don't you go to Bobs?"

"Bobs?" She hesitated. "I couldn't go to Bobs. He wouldn't help me out anyway. Doctors aren't allowed to."

"He'd do anything in the world for you, Dee."

"If he would, that's all the more reason why I couldn't go to him with this," muttered Dee obscurely.

Pat had an inspiration. "I could. I'll tell him. I'll tell him the whole thing. Except about Angel-face, of course. I'll tell him he's just got to get you out of it. Let me, Dee."

"Oh, go ahead! I don't care. I don't care about anything. I wish I were dead."

"Don't be an ass. We'll fix it." Pat was exuberant with the sense of great and delicate affairs in her hands. "I'll go right now and tackle him. If he sends for you will you come?"

The response was curt and unexpected: "Are you?"

"For not going through with it, you mean?"

"Yes. On Jimmie's account. It's as much his as yours."

"Is it?" Bitter laughter followed. "He's no right to it. He's no right to me."

"Why didn't you quit him, then? I would have. In a minute."

"I couldn't. You don't know."

"You could have come home. Of course there'd have been a stink up, but——"

"I wouldn't have cared. I'd have done anything to get away from him. But he found out—about Stanley."

"Stanley? Oh, Angel-face! Dee, had you?"

"No; no! There was never any question of that between us," she said moodily. "I did meet him, though. It was accidental at first, for I never meant to see him again after I married Jim. After that we met once in a while, for walks and in places like the skating rink. That was all there was to it, but Jim found it out and used it to blackmail me and hold me to the marriage. White slave stuff, on the respectable side! But Bobs won't do anything," she added dully. "You'll see."

Pat caught her in a sudden, reassuring hug. "Leave it to me," was her commonplace but confident rejoinder to this baring of a woman's self-thought and therefore doubly grim tragedy.

Solemn Face

"Why the face so solemn, Infant?" he greeted her.

"I've got something serious to say to you, Bobs."

"What dovilment have you been up to now?"

"Hello!" His expression changed. "Anything wrong?"

"Yes. She's going to have a baby."

"Dee," he murmured, "a mother." He lost himself in musing, seeming to forget Pat's presence.

"But she doesn't want to be a mother."

"Eh?" Osterhout quite jumped, startled by the emphasis which Pat gave to the assertion. "Oh! That's unimportant. They often don't in the early stages."

"She never will. Never! Never!" the physician smiled tolerantly.

"I?" The scandalized amazement in his expression tempted Pat to mirth, but she restrained herself. "Help her out! In what way, may I ask?"

"You needn't say-I-ask in that hateful tone. You know perfectly well. You do those things, don't they?"

"Oh, certainly! By all means. It's the bread and malzatay of the profession."

"Now you're being sarcastic. And it's terribly serious."

"Send her back to Dee and tell her not to be a damned fool. She ought to be ashamed of herself for sending you on such an errand. I don't understand it in Dee."

"Intimately Revealing the Life of a Modern and Precocious Society Flapper

"Liar yourself, Bobs. She did not send me. I came. And"—a little breathlessly—"if you don't do it for her somebody else will."

"Somebody else? Who?"

Osterhout swore vividly and solemnously. "Just what I said! Leaving such filth about where girls can pick it up!" His rose, shuffled over to Pat, took her chin between finger and thumb and peered down into her limpid, troubled eyes. "What's behind all this foolishness?" came the stern question.

"Oh, Bobs! Be good and help us. She can't have the baby. Truly she can't. I mustn't tell you why, but you'd say so, too, if you knew."

Pat was vehemently indignant, notwithstanding that she had put a like query a few moments earlier. "Of course it is!"

"Then it's probably the very best thing that could happen to her."

"Won't you believe me, Bobs." Pat implored, "when I tell you—"

"I'm going to put you out of this house in a minute if you don't stop talking such trash."

"You won't help her?"

Played Her Trump Card

Then Pat, offering in a silent prayer to the genius of histrionics, played her trump card. "Will you help—me, then?"

Her eyes were cast down; that was in the role she had assumed; but she heard his pipe clatter to the floor, felt the insistence of his stare fixed upon her.

"Bambina!" It was long since he had called her by the old pet name of her childhood. The realization of what the reversion implied almost broke down her resolution. But she instantly recovered her self-command; was wholly the physician. "Tell me about it," he said gently and low.

"What is there to tell more?" She threw out her arms in what she considered the proper gesture. "Are you sure?"

"Yes. Or I'd never have come to you."

"Who is the man?"

"Tell me, Pat."

Her lips set in firm indicating (as she had seen determination "registered" on the screen) that rather would she die than betray her lover.

"Why? Is he married?"

"Then I'll drive the dirty whelp out of town. Pat, you're not going to leave this room until you tell me."

"What's the use, Bobs? I'll never tell. He'd marry me if he could. Oh, you needn't go guessing," she added hastily. "You've never seen or heard of him. Word of honor."

He went over to the window and stood, staring out into the soft, gray drizzle of an early thaw. When he turned to her his face was set in a still resignation.

Absolutely Certain

"Then, will you marry me?"

"No."

"I'm offering you a marriage of safety; a marriage of form only. I should never make any claim on you."

"But, why should you do it?"

"Why shouldn't I? I'd do it for your mother's sake if for no other reason. It isn't as if I had anything else to do with my life. You needn't be afraid of my ever bothering you; and when the time comes you can get a quick divorce."

Pat fell back into her chair, her brain still whirling. "No. No. I can't. I won't. Is this world! I couldn't even think of it."

"If the idea of me as a pretended husband is so repulsive——"

A STRANGE HOUSEBOAT

"LOOK, Foxy Grandad!" cried Bobby, running to me, holding up something that looked like a mass of seaweed. "Look what I found in the lake! It's a bird's nest that must have fallen out of a tree. See, there are three eggs in it!"

"Now, stand still," Bunny also, each grebe family lives in a floating nest—just like a houseboat. How would you like to come home some day and find your houseboat high and dry on shore?"

"What a blessing, Bunny, that you happened along," I exclaimed. "If you hadn't, Bobby and I might have broken up a happy family."

"Yes," Bunny agreed. "You see, each grebe family lives in a floating nest—just like a houseboat. How would you like to come home some day and find your houseboat high and dry on shore?"

LESSONS OF HEREDITY

By Brice Belden, M. D.

OUR knowledge of heredity has increased greatly during the past few years. It is now possible to guard against the perpetuation of undesirable traits and of unhealthy conditions in the offspring.

Progress in our understanding of this subject has come from two lines of study; researches upon human heredity or the science of eugenics, which originated with Galton, and researches in plant and animal breeding, originated by Mendel.

Mental ability is without doubt inherited. Of course, the influence of environment has to be considered, since the children of the most able and brilliant parents would be likely to have the best surroundings. A debate still rages over the question as to which is the most important, heredity or environment. Nevertheless, it appears to be well settled that mental ability is actually inherited, as is also feeblemindedness.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

Is it proper to cut all the meat on your plate before you start eating, or should it be cut piece by piece?

You must never cut all the meat on your plate before you start eating. This is one of the most ill-bred things that can be done and would stamp you at once as having no sense of table manners. Cut a small piece of the meat and eat it before you cut the next piece.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

(1) Please tell me what the groom wears at a three o'clock wedding when the bride wears a white dress and hat.

(2) Also, is it proper for the bride to carry a large bouquet?

A CONSTANT READER.

The conventional clothes for the groom at a daytime wedding are morning coat (cutaway) and dark striped gray trousers. If, for some reason, the groom does not wish to wear these formal clothes, or if the wedding is to be very small or very informal, a dark blue business suit is acceptable.

(2) Yes.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) Is it proper for a bride to wear colored satin slippers and silk stockings to match?

(2) Also is it proper for the bridesmaids to wear satin slippers and silk hose, colored to match their gowns?

M. P.

Is the bride to wear white? If so, the colored slippers and stockings would be in poor taste. She should wear white satin slippers and stockings. Satin slippers and silk stockings of the same color as her dress would of course be consistent if she decides not to wear the bride's own color—white.

(2) When the bride plans her wedding party she usually plans the costumes of her bridesmaids in different colors. It is the best form to carry this color throughout the costume, and this means, of course, that the slippers and stockings should match the dress. It makes an awkward break in the line of the costume if the slippers and stockings are of different color.

Hair Often Ruined by Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store; it is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

ONCE OVERS

(Copyright, 1923, by International Feature Service, Inc.)

DON'T MURMUR ABOUT EXPENSE OF HOLIDAY.

You have promised yourself and your family a certain form of recreation for this Summer.

But now that it is time for you to part with money which is to buy the very thing you have planned, you begrudge the money.

Fact is that you cannot do as you have planned and also a lot of other things which you very much want to take advantage of.

There must be a cut somewhere.

It takes away a lot of joy which you might have if there must be a constant reminder for everybody that "this thing is going to cost a lot of money."

Be a good sport and take the money as you have saved and planned to do—cut out the short auto trips and save for the big one, and do it without a murmur or else give it up entirely.

Do not let that little girl get an idea that it was all "talk" from the start.

Children are as quick as older persons to set you in the class where you belong and while they may not say a word to you about your "crawling" it takes considerable to regain the confidence lost.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

THE majority of States have good roads nowadays, but some of them are so crooked they look like they must have been dug with a cork screw.

ONE guy went around so many curves he got dizzy. He thought the man he bought the car from had made a mistake and sold him a merry-go-round.

IF there was a stick or a big rock in the way, the contractor didn't bother to move it he just built the road around it.

WHENEVER a State runs short of money to build a highway, they just stick up a "Detour" sign.

ONE motorist was so dumb he thought that Detour was the name of a city.

THEN she remarked that the roads to the town of Detour were terrible.

IN some States the roads are so rough you have to ride in closed cars to keep from being thrown out.

ONE guy said a sedan always gave him a headache, because he hit the top so often.

THIS will give you a headache, but it'll cure your dandruff.

ONE motorist traveled over such rough roads that he had to nail his feet to the floor to keep from bouncing out of the car.

THE machine went into some ruts that were so deep that even the spare tire on the back of the car got a puncture.

FINALLY he hit a big rut and it sent his car skidding into a wheat field where it started riding easier. He said, "Thank heaven, I'm on good road again."

ROUGH roads are all right if you have shock absorbers, but you can't always have them. Once in a while your wife and her mother have to stay at home.

THERE is every kind of accessory on the market to make motoring comfortable and it won't be long before we'll even be able to take an extra set of good roads on our trips with us.

Dennis Fagan was on his way home. At least, he was floundering along in the right direction. Suddenly he fell over, and pulled himself to his feet, to find the parish priest in front of him. "Dennis! "Daddy," young Benjamin asked one day, "is today tomorrow?" "No, my son; of course it isn't tomorrow," was the reply. "But you said it was," murmured Benjamin. "When did I say today was tomorrow?" asked the father. "Yesterday." "Well, it was. Today was tomorrow yesterday, but today is today, just as yesterday was today, yesterday, but is yesterday today, and tomorrow will be today tomorrow, which makes today yesterday and tomorrow all at once. Now, run along and play."

Archie and Walter were indulging in an infuriated fight. Walter was a guest in Archie's home. Archie had just bestowed a tremendous kick upon his playmate when his father came on the scene. "Why did you kick Walter?" he asked severely. "I'm tired of playing with him," was the answer. "I want him to go home." "Then why didn't you ask him to go home?" inquired the stern parent. "Oh!"—it was the young hopeful's turn to be shocked—"why, daddy, that wouldn't be polite!"

BUSY DAYS IN BOSTON BASEBALL

By NICK FLATLEY

Remarkable how the boss keep turning out. There were more than 12,000 at the Saturday double header, but no good reason at all. There have been surge simply large gangs every day at both parks. In other towns, fair enders draw three or four hundred. Here they play to thousands, and the enthusiasm runs over at the slightest chance. Must make the new Braves mighty hot stuff to think of the dollars that fly off on the wings of every defeat.

SHELBY FIASCO LESSON TO SMALL PROMOTERS

By WARREN W. BROWN

Shelby, Mont., July 8.—It will be a long time before another tiny [illegible] such as this will attempt to stage a world's heavyweight championship. Shelby's experience will probably stop all small towns [illegible] advertising stickers and [illegible] trying to butt in on the big time made famous by Jones, Dundee, Tex Rickard and a few others.

Inexperience and rashness to take advice from those who might have helped, caused the town's newspapermen into confidences and, in most cases gross misrepresentation of facts to them, all contributed to make the Dempsey-Gibbons fight promotion a problem that was not solved until within thirty hours of the actual time the men entered the arena. FIRPO AND WILLARD EXPECTED TO FURNISH HARD BATTLE

JESS IS FIT FOR YOUNG RIVAL

By THOMAS L. CUMMINSKEY

New York, July 9.—It's been many a long day since Promoter Tex Rickard booked a fight of such widespread interest as is apparent in the Jess Willard-Luis Firpo fray, set for Thursday night at Boyle's Thirty Acres, [illegible]

Everybody seems to be looking for a [illegible] between the giants as they step out when the opening bell sounds and try to slug each [illegible]. It is pretty sure to be all that is expected.

The Jersey Arena, of 90,000 capacity built for the Jack Dempsey-Carpentier bout two years ago, will be filled from ringside [illegible]. Already of [illegible] seats in the [illegible] have been disposed of.

WILLARD TO GET $175,000.

FIRPO WILL RECEIVE $112,000

A half million gate will mean [illegible] getting around $175,000, and the South American [illegible] Willard [illegible] is quite sure to [illegible] Dempsey for the [illegible] of the fortune, provided [illegible] has had an [illegible] [illegible] signed [illegible] Jack Dempsey, [illegible] the champion, for a bout.

A fight for the championship returns, the custom-made suit of both gladiators [illegible] Willard to get at Dempsey again.

And less how he feels about Firpo, and [illegible] says he will be [illegible].

Never saw him fight but [illegible] what I have heard about his ring [illegible] he ought [illegible] to [illegible] form. That fight with Dempsey did me a lot of good. After a long tay off the New Jersey Boxing Commission doctors tested me and found me in fine condition [illegible] be ready in a few days now for Firpo.

Another surprise arranged by Matchmaker Power is the second eight, which will bring together Ray Newman, the Jersey City [illegible] and Al Gaff of Greenwich Village, former New York State amateur middleweight champion. Doc Bagley, who managed Clair, predicts his man will be the next titleholder in his division.

NAMESTERS! What can you do with your name?

Can you make a funny sentence out of it? Or a wise sentence? Or a snappy one? Or a slangy one? Or any kind of a sentence?

The Boston American offers a dollar to any one who sends in a bright or unusual sentence made up of the first letters of either your FIRST, middle or LAST name.

Every one printed gets a dollar. Each week a prize of $5 will be given to the best one used that week.

Everybody in Boston takes a shot at this game. It's plenty of fun trying to figure out the different sentences you can make in this way. And if you get one printed it means a dollar, or $5 if it is the best one printed during the week.

Send as many as you like. Make up sentences from your first, middle or last name. Nobody is barred.

A RHYMING OPTIMIST

WINGS are whirring, twigs are stirring in each tree in every street; birds repeating merry greeting: "Twitter, twitter, tweet, tweet, tweet!" Gayly singing, now they're winging from the sunny Southern clime, each newcomer trills of Summer and of Spring, the nesting time. Jay and swallow gladly follow where the south wind leads the way, flying lightly while the sprightly April hastes to meet the May. Doves are cooing in their wooing, telling tales of flowers to be; straight as arrows go the sparrows to the gnarled old apple tree. Winter hours banished flowers and the days were dark and long, lacking lightness, lacking brightness, lacking feathered bits of song. Men grow weary for the cheery notes of robin and of thrush; now their thrilling songs are trilling from each wayside tree and bush. What a chatter on the matter of a place to build a nest! Ruffling feather, stormy weather, can't agree on which is best! Cloudy hours, sudden showers, wrens beneath the spreading eaves; sunlight beaming, old earth steaming, fresher green upon the leaves. Mists of morning are adorning hills seen dimly through the dark, when far over field and cover fall the love-notes of the lark, sweet as honey; earth grows sunny to that magic madrigal; shadows fading, light invading as the song floods over all. Free and easy, bright and breezy as the bluebirds' glad refrain, days go winging, folks go singing when the birds are back again! Clouds are rifted, wings are lifted down the dim lanes and woodland ways; earth is brighter, hearts are lighter, birds are singing through the days!

HOW often history overlooks the most important ones and fills the books with kings and crooks and tales of swords and guns! I never read about the Ark without such thoughts as these, that Queer old boat alone afloat upon the world-wide seas! From every side we've always known the wonders of that craft; through all our days we've heard its praise, its marvels, fore and aft. It must have been a splendid sight upon that raging flood to watch it pose, but then, alas! sightseeing was not good. For none were there to cheer her on, to tell her where to park. There were no docks with safety locks to hold the valiant bark. So Noah's fame is dearly bought, he saved the human race; but ah! today, whose wife would stay in Mrs. Noah's place? Before the task that lady faced the brawest spirit quails; just ask your spouse if she'd keep house for Polar bears and snails! What awful spats arose each day to mar the harmony when dogs and cats and bugs were in one family. How trying must have been her part to soothe the lion's wrath, to give the gnu and kangaroo their daily morning bath! So, when I read about the flood with notes of Noah's life, I wonder why they don't supply more news of Noah's wife. It seems the part she had to play was quite important too.

Bobbie and His Pa

By Wm. F. Kirk

TODAY will have to bild sum new houses in our town bee4 four long, sed Pa last nite, I see in the paper a lot of ads for houses in which to live in, and we. Our litel city is growing, sed Pa.

I am glad to be living in a growing city instead of in a Deserted Village, sed Ma. Think how heswallowing it wuld be to live in a Deserted Village, sed Ma.

That was the kind of Village you were living in wen I first saw you & first herd yure girlish giggeling, sed Pa.

You have yure nerve rite with you, sed Ma, to speak thus of my old home town. I lived in one of the most butiful litel cities in the nashun, sed Ma. How often I have herd dear old daddy speak of its grate shade trees & twining street, sed Ma.

The streets was stepin enuff to embark from it, I notis, sed Pa, wen I cain along to take you away as my loving wife, sed Pa. I shall never forget the look of happy-ness on yure face wen you left yure old hoam & yure hoam town, to be my wife. Well mite you be proud & happy, wife, sed Pa. Well mite you.

I suppose I cud have made a worse choice, sed Ma. I think sumtimes how sum of my guri chums married men that turned out bad, sed Ma, & at such times I am thankerful, sed Ma.

Yes, sed Pa, you showed yure bright mind by choosing me, sed Pa. Many of the other guris were looking my way in them days, sed Pa, sum of them butiful & wealthy, but somehow I had no eyes for anybody but you, deer est, sed Pa.

Well, sed Ma, I guess it was all for the best, tho sumtimes wen you mak fun of my old hoam town & my dear old dad, sed Ma, I feel like crowning you with the skillet, skilfully, sed Ma.

You wuddent do that to a poor, feebul old husband like me, wud you, deer? sed Pa. Pa was left ing, but he wuddent be laffing if anybody else called him a poor, feebul husband. Pa is stucked up about how strong he is for his age.

I aint going to never move away from this town, I sed, tho aids on our baseball team needs me for litel pitcher.

You nevver did, I sed, & I got good & sear, it aint fare to kid a kid about a guri, wen I grow up if I have a litel boy I will nevver kid him about a guri that is raw work, I guess this will be all for this here essay, it is time to go to the movie.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston American.

"Mama, how was I born?"

Her mother, somewhat startled, said:

"Why, dear, the way we were all born.

"Well," said Rachel, "was I cut out by a pattern and tooble, or was I a plant on a tree?"

CHANGE HIS NUMBER

Few persons in Pine Top had ever seen an automobile, and when a big car stopped for a few minutes in the isolated village, the curious inhabitants gazed at it with a mixture of fear and awe. The owner who had entered the general store to make a purchase, heard one rustic remark:

"I'll bet it's a man killer."

"Sure," assented another.

"Look at the number on the back. That shows how many people it's run over. That's accordin' to law. Now, if that fellow was to run over anybody here in Pine Top, it would be our duty to telegraph that number—1344—to the next town."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Have you ever been at a play where a chorus, which you could swear had been dressed green, were all in red the next instant you would without their having left the stage or done any changing of costume?

* * *

The Bear—The stock market is going from bad to worse.

The Bull—Not at all. It recovered some ground since last week and it was clear at times that it was becoming difficult for the shorts to get stock without forcing quotations higher.

The Bear—I don't like the 5 per cent. call money we had, and how low the banks' reserves dropped this week.

The Bull—Call money always stiffens in connection with the July 1 dividend and interest payments, and the weekly bank statement always reflects liquidation mainly in the first week of each half year. The banks of this country never were in a stronger position than they are today. They have so much money that they are forced to buy securities to keep some sort of profit employed. If rates go up it will be because business is booming. If business does not boom, then there will be such vast money that stocks are pretty sure to go up.

* * *

The Bear—Business has flattened out. Look what has happened in steel.

The Bull—You mean that speculative placing of orders has flattened out, not production of steel or actual consumption of steel. Judge Gary, you may have noticed, did not complain this week of a shortage of business, but a 40,000 tons shortage of workers. Very sad, isn't it?

* * *

The Bear—All you need to do is to look at what is happening to prices in general to convince you that things are going to the dogs. You can't deny that prices are tumbling.

The Bull—A very good thing it is that prices did not keep on soaring the way they were doing months ago. If they had, we would have been on the highway of inflation by now, with prices inviting another buyers' strike, wages skyrocketing, labor unprofitable, and a boom careering along at a rate which would have ended in disaster just as sure as death and taxes. Foreigners would have liked nothing better, for they would have known that they could then swamp us with their lower-cost products.

* * *

The Bear—Isn't it a pity that the weather lately has been so favorable to the crops? Look what it's beating to do for farm prices.

The Bull—Would you have preferred a crop calamity? Genuine prosperity can't continue or indeed be even failures, but by bountiful harvests.

* * *

The Bull—You would rather have seen dollar gasoline and famine prices for all kinds of fuels, I suppose? If the oil companies hadn't brought out staggering amounts of new supplies and paid so many stock dividends, quotations for their shares will do them good, and low prices for oil are not exactly a bad thing or thing for everybody else, for the consumers.

D. & H. MAKES SMART GAIN FOR DAY

Oils, rails, steels and equipments were in demand in the New York stock market, which displayed a firm tone most of the day. Transactions were slowed down by the raising of call money from 5 to 6 per cent., and prices were rim off from the day's best.

On reassuring statement regarding dividend and denial of alleged sudden selling Delaware & Hudson crossed par up around 5 points.

American Agricultural Chemical preferred added 3 points. There were 2 point gains for Pierce-Arrow preferred and Youngstown Steel & Tube. In Pont and Tidewater Oil advanced over 3 points.

Gains of a point or more showed for Gramby, American Can, Beech nut Associated Dry Goods, Baldwin Loco Pref, Continental Can, Endicott-Johnson, Gulf States Steel, May Stores, Maldeson Alkali, Pan-American "A," Pressed Steel Car, Republic Steel, Utah Copper and Stewart-Warner.

Schulte Retail Stores was up 1½ for a new 1923 high, then sold over 2 points under that figure. Pierce oil preferred dropped 4 points to a new 1923 low.

Regardless of what United States Steel is earning, the fact remains that the common stock has book value of about $260 a share, against $147 10 years ago. This increase is due to total expenditures of $1,100,000,000 for new construction and addition of $400,000,000 to working capital since organization.

Steel has annual investment value of $2,500,000,000. If total earnings for the second quarter reach $45,000,000 net available for interest and dividends will approximate $35,750,000 or $.40 per com. annually on investment of $2,500,000,000. Latter part of the surplus will go into new construction.

Rally Is Staged in Bonds of New Haven

Improvement was noted in the bid side of the market. Substantial rally was staged in some of the New Haven bonds. New Haven 4% of 1956 recovered from 50¾ to 52¼ and the frame 7s 1½ points to 55.

Other speculative railroad bonds also displayed a firmer tone. Coalers and issues were especially in good demand, selling fractionally higher. Seaboard Airline adjustment 4s improved a half point at 27¾.

Strength was shown by a number of industrial issues. Central Foundry 6% Chemical 7½s with warrants advanced a point to 60. The 7 per cent bonds were a half point higher at 93. Cuban Dominican 8s were 8½ "B" and Marmon 8s were firm spots.

Public utility bonds were steady excepting Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph 5's which declined nearly two points to 92¾.

Wall St. Gossip

"I EXPECT regular quarterly dividend will be declared at meeting of board of managers of Delaware & Hudson this month," says Vice-President Williams.

STANDARD Oil will have 25 per cent. share in Turkish Petroleum Co.'s concessions in Mgadi, if present negotiations are successful.

SEARS ROEBUCK, in common with other mail order houses is now buying much more extensively than earlier this year.

WESTERN Maryland's net income after May fixed charges of $1,000,000 showed $161,884 against $2,718 for same month in 1922.

GENERAL Electric is to furnish electrical equipment for nine locomotives which the Reading will be using in Philadelphia, being made by J. G. Brill Co.

ST. PAUL has been sold on poor showing of May net, interest for said month 10 times date.

WORTHINGTON Pump merger, which is to take it into the Canadian market, is expected to be consummated before end of the year.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB is said to have been buying Bethlehem Steel on the way down.

BALTIMORE & Ohio dividend requisition on common is expected by some at December meeting if earnings keep up.

TRAVEL BRIEFS
NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL

Travel from New England to the National Parks and cities on the Pacific Coast has reached a volume far in excess of any in the previous history of the offline offices. In some instances the number of reservations requested has become so great that it has been a problem for the local representative to secure accommodations for all who want to go sight-seeing through the West.

Several of the railroads report a total gross business for the month of June, 300 to 400 per cent. higher than that rolled during August, 1922, and 600 to 800 per cent. higher than the best pre-war years.

Usually the first week or two in July witnesses a falling off in the demand, with a resumption during the last two weeks continuing until about August 15, when the sale of tickets began to drop off. While there has been a slight let-down during the past week, there has been nothing approaching the usual slump.

An instance of the way in which reservations are being made occurred at the office of the Great Northern Railway on Tuesday afternoon. At 2 o'clock the day's business and accumulation from the previous day had been entirely cleaned up and New England passenger agent J. H. Kenney and his assistant, Ray Lyons, were contemplating the probability of a restful holiday over the Fourth. Shortly after that the phone rang, and before 5 o'clock, telephone reservations and personal calls at the office had resulted in a total of twenty-nine reservations for Glacier National Park and points beyond on the Great Northern line. Eighteen of the reservations were for Glacier. In about two hours over a carload of business had been booked.

The rush showed but slight indication of slowing down on Thursday, for nine similar long distance reservations were booked before noon.

Similar conditions exist in other offices, and the traveler who wants to be sure of obtaining the accommodations he or she desires will be wise in making reservations as far in advance as possible.

NEW 70-HOUR SCHEDULE.

Announcement is made by the local office of the Chicago & North Western Railway that, effective July 15, the crack Overland Limited from Washington limited from Chicago to Portland via C. & N. W. and Union Pacific system will cut two hours off its present 72-hour schedule in both directions.

Westbound this train will leave Chicago at 10:15 p. m., arrive in Omaha at 11:35 a. m., and in Portland at 6:15 the following evening. Eastbound the departure from Portland will be at 9:25 a. m., with the arrival in Omaha at 8:15 p. m. the following evening and reaching Chicago at 9:55 a. m. the succeeding day.

PORTLAND TRAFFIC OUTING.

A large number of local railway representatives will leave for Portland next Monday morning to attend the outing and annual meeting of the Portland Railway and Steamship Traffic Association, which will be held on Long Island, July 16. The local delegation will leave North Station at 7.50 a.m., Standard Time, and leave Portland via boat from Casco Bay Lines' Wharf at 2 p.m., Daylight Saving Time.

There will be a regular New England clam bake, preceded by a ball game and other sports, for which suitable prizes have been offered. The Portland Traffic men have established a reputation as such notable hosts that all who can get away from the local offices are planning to attend.

NEW TYPE OF TRAVELER.

"The traveler of today is of a different type than those of fifteen and twenty years ago," said Ralph E. Towle, head of the Travel Department of the American Express Company, in an interview recently. "Since that time many luxuries and methods of providing for the traveler have been invented and the things which satisfied the tourist of previous years will not attract the modern traveler.

"Ten years ago there were only two cruises around the world. One was a popular priced cruise of a chartered steamer, and the other a cruise de Luxe conducted by the Hamburg-American Line on one of its best ships. This line set a standard for world travel, and while its prices were considerably higher than that on the popular priced cruise, all accommodations on its cruises could sell out a month before sailing day. Long in advance.

"In 1914 pleasure cruising came to an abrupt stop. It was not until 1921 that world cruising was resumed. Ships suitable for this service up to that time could be used profitably by the trans-Atlantic lines for regular service during the year round. With the advent of additional tonnage, some of the steamers could be released for cruising and they were chartered to a number of tourists agencies like ours, who put them in the various cruises, and this season we have chartered the new S. S. Franconia, a 20,000 ton ship, built especially for cruising around the world.

"With the entrance of the Franconia in the cruising field, a new standard in world cruising has been set. This wonderful ship is the last word in construction and affords the maximum comfort and opportunities for relaxation and pleasure. She has one of the largest swimming pools afloat which, with a gymnasium and squash court, occupy the entire width of the ship. Over sixty rooms have private baths, and there are many conveniences which will add to the pleasure of this long voyage.

"The traveler of today has become an expert calculating device. Instead of looking at the cost of a trip around the world at a net figure, he now resolves it into his ordinary living expenses for a period of 133 days and the difference between this figure and the price of the ticket is the cost of the trip, for on the Franconia cruise all necessary expenses afloat and ashore other than tips and laundry are included."

This new vessel is the first transatlantic liner of the de luxe type to be put into service by a German company since the war. She is a twin-screw oil burner of 22,000 gross tonnage, driven by turbines, and has accommodations for 250 first-class passengers, 350 second-class and 700 third-class.

The Albert Ballin, which was built by the Blohm & Voss yard at Hamburg, is the first merchant vessel to incorporate a new stabilizing device, combining the Foerster system of bulges on the sides and the Frahm anti-rolling tank. This device, which has been successfully applied to naval vessels, gives not only greater steadiness, but also added safety due to the double skin of the hull at the waterline. By placing the anti-rolling tanks in the bulges, considerable space is saved.

A sister ship, the Deutschland, was recently launched at Hamburg and will enter service about six months later. Both these new vessels will be run in joint service with the steamers Resolute and Reliance of the United American lines.

FOUR ARE DEAD IN WEEK-END AUTO CRASHES

Four persons were instantly killed, two were injured, and six narrowly escaped injury in week-end motor accidents in New England.

The dead are:

Emmett Geer, fourteen years old, Wheelockville, Uxbridge. He is survived by his twin brother Ralph, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Geer.

According to witnesses, they were traveling down Mendon street at approximately fifty miles an hour, and were rounding a curve when the front wheel bent and broke.

Playing in the street near his home, Donald Rowe, 3 years old, of Winter street, Lowell, was instantly killed when he was run over by an automobile owned and operated by Manuel Ramalho, also of Winter street. Ramalho was arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

Theresa Merrill of Pine Point, Me., was killed when an automobile upset at Kennebunk Beach, Me.

Deputy Sheriff Jones of Kennebunk Beach said he would ask for a warrant charging manslaughter against Barnum Jennison of Cape Porpoise, owner and operate of the car. He alleges that Jennison hit the rear of an automobile standing in front of a hotel.

How Do Men Think?

What Is Thought, Life's Greatest Mystery?

Copyright, 1923, Hearst Company

We human beings possess just two things—this earth with its material wealth and material forces, AND THOUGHT.

With the earth for a basis and thought the developer and improver, we have acquired all of our wealth.

We owe as much to that mysterious power called thought as we do to the earth itself with all its wealth.

What was man without the thinking power? He was a feeble, defenceless, hopeless creature, too weak to fight the big animals, too slow to catch the fleet animals. ONLY THOUGHT COULD SAVE HIM.

Thought taught him to make the pit with the sharp stake at the bottom. The rhinoceros, the mammoth, the bear, fell into the trap, were caught and killed, by human THOUGHT.

Thought taught man to make the bow with its arrow fleeter than the flight of the deer, able to overtake a flying bird on the wing.

Put your thought upon THOUGHT ITSELF. What have you not that you do not owe to thought?

The coal was in the mine. Only thought could get it out and make use of it for power.

The ocean is full of water. Only thought could change it into steam and run the engine that moves the train.

Thought changes the sheep's wool into the cloth upon your back, the cotton's fleece into the shirt, or sheet.

Thought is a cannibal and lives upon thought. Your thought is fed by other thoughts bound up in books.

WHAT IS THOUGHT?

We do not pretend and shall not try to answer that question. It is as old as man.

The savage, thinking in a dull way, slept at night and found his dreams a mass of thought, distorted, strange, unreal. From those thoughts came his ideas of ghosts and devils, and of innumerable gods, kind or wicked—at least, so scientific men tell you.

HOW do men think? We know that there are in nature certain material forces that we call light, heat, electricity, magnetism, etc. All of them might be classed under one word, MOTION. When things stand still, to our eyes, one condition prevails, which we call "inertia." When there is movement our mind tells us that force is at work. A stone falls to the earth, and we recognize the force of gravitation.

In thought our minds see many divisions, many mental forces at work. In the great soldier we think we see the fighting force, in the painter or poet, artistic thought; and Arkwright's brain, that gave us the spinning jenny to clothe our bodies, we call the inventive thought.

May it not be that there is only ONE kind of thought, ONE great thinking force, complex, infinite in power, which works through us little human beings here, producing certain little results here, and greater results through glorious intellects on greater planets, or on great suns?

The problem of the engineer who uses the electric current is to MAKE BETTER MACHINES through which that current may act. He has the perfect current in quantities unlimited. His car may go ten miles an hour, a hundred or a thousand miles. The power will do it if the machine be right.

Humanity is the engineer whose business it is to utilize here the earth's power of thought, the cosmic force that regulates the universe.

Is it not our task on this earth to produce better brains, BETTER THINKING MACHINES, through which the perfect power of force may work?

Nothing could be more inspiring than the thought that mankind is to work out its problems through affection, through goodness, creating through the highest conceivable moral human relationship the perfect brain through which perfect universal thought may act.

Fishes Can Reason—

Many Voters Don't. It Seems

Copyright, 1923, Hearst Company

A Frenchman shows by experiment that fishes can reason, to a limited extent, and slowly. After you have caught them on a hook, baited with white paper, and put them back in the pond, they will not bite that kind of a hook for six days. At the end of six days they forget and bite.

It seems unjust to say that these fish are inferior in reasoning powers.

The people of the United States are not fish, but highly intelligent human beings. Yet, after they have bitten at a certain political bait, you can make them bite again, quickly, and get hooked again.

Fish, it seems, can learn to get the bait off the hook without swallowing the hook. Voters do not learn that. They swallow the hook and don't get the bait.

Another piece of news that comes from Paris with the fish story, and also authentic, tells that the plate from the coffin of the great monarch, Louis XIV., has been found in a little restaurant where it was used as a frying-pan. On it, beneath the soot, was written, "Here lies a magnificent Prince, King Louis XIV." Read Buckle's chapter on Louis XIV. and you will know that a coffin plate is as good a frying-pan as he was a King.

ANCIENT UR BUILDINGS FOUND

London, July 9.—A discovery connected with the famous proclamation of Nebuchadnezzar, for refusing to obey which Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego were cast into the burning fiery furnace, has been made by the joint expedition sent out to Ur of the Chaldees by the British Museum and the University Museum, Philadelphia.

Mr. C. Leonard Wooley, director of the expedition, states that the temple of the Moon-God proved to be of the greatest interest.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

Editor Boston American:

Our President in his speeches wants to indicate he has remained a true friend to labor unions by smashing capitalist plot to overthrow same. Indeed he has done nothing in that direction. If he has smashed anything he smashed the service men's hopes of a square deal, when he succumbed to foreign propaganda by letting Wall Street bankers extend loans to other nations, who are building naval bases and mighty battlefleets with our money instead of providing loans for ex-service men's homebuilding, which would benefit this country more than any world courts and foreign entanglements. He forgot the slogan, "America first," and by his insistence on world courts he is putting America and its welfare last.

ALEX G. HAGLIND.

Hypocrisy

Editor Boston American:

English propaganda in this country preached by Englishmen and so-called Americans is doing its very best to drag us into the League of Nations that England, with the assistance of America, may rule the world for her own selfish purposes. Three cheers for Mr. Hearst and his able writers for exposing the trickery of the scoundrels who call themselves Americans.

JAMES J. BARLOW.

Husband Ill

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a few things which any one may have. I will pay postage. MRS. P. A.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. F. E. M., whose husband is not well.

Clothing for Girls

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please send me the address of some poor woman who needs clothing for girls from nine to ten and fourteen to fifteen, as I could help her out.

MRS. R. E. D.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of M. W. 2, who has girls of these ages in need of clothing.

Nothing to Wear

Editor Helping Hand:

I am left an invalid when baby was born seven years ago. My husband has not worked for a year because times were dull, and he could not get work. We all need clothing very much. I am thirty-five years old and wear size 40. My little girl is six years old. She has nothing at all to wear. My husband wears size 34. If I could get plain sewing to do or day work of any kind, or laundry work at my home so I could take care of my baby, I would be very grateful indeed.

MRS. M. F. 3.

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a Summer linen suit, size 40, and a pair of white slippers, size 2½, and some Summer dresses to be made over for little girls, and a Summer hat and other clothing. If you know of anyone that could use such things, ask them to call, and I have other things to show them which they might want. I am moving soon, so let me know if you find anyone who wants these things. Wish I could do more.

J. R.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. M. B., who has several little girls to clothe. She has been asked to call on you.

Gives Vacation

Editor Helping Hand:

I wish to thank you for your kindness in sending me the letters that came to your office in answer to my offer to give some girl a Summer vacation at our camp. I have given the chance to A. M., of Cambridge. I have sent her a railroad ticket and she is to meet me next Thursday and spend a few days at my home, when we will go by auto to the camp. She is a girl scout and I think she will find many things of interest in camp life. I am glad to give a little pleasure to one who I fear has none too much of this world's comforts. I wish I could do more.

MRS. H. T. T.

I am sure you will make her very happy. Thank you.

For a 14-Year-Old

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a few things size 38 and a good pair of shoes for a fourteen-year-old girl. Would like to help any way I can. Some of the things could be made over.

MRS. F. 2.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. A. M. W., who has seven children to provide clothes for.

Dress and Shoes

Editor Helping Hand:

I have read the Helping Hand in your paper many times, and I wish I could help everyone. I have a pair of good low shoes, medium heel, size 3½, or 4, and a tricotine dress, dark blue, size 18, which I should like to give some girl who is having a hard time.

MRS. C. H. B.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. C. M. W., whose husband is sick, and who has three girls to look out for.

Thanks for $3.00

Editor Helping Hand:

I want to thank you for the check for three dollars that you sent me. I was so surprised when I received it I didn't know what to do. I should like to have you thank the people who were so kind to send it. The money certainly came in handy.

MRS. M. G.

The three dollars was from two people ($2 and $1), neither of whom gave addresses. They deserve the best of thanks, and we herewith add ours to yours.

Needs Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a poor woman left with two small children—a boy eight and a girl four. I get a few washings to do, but I was in the hospital a little while ago, and my doctor tells me I will have to be operated upon again. My heart is nearly broken from worrying for fear of leaving the children alone if I should die. I would be very grateful for clothes for the children, or myself, size 38.

B. H. 3.

Wants Magazines

Editor Helping Hand:

My neighbor has received the toys from a Roslindale friend and appreciates her thoughtfulness and kindness. Is there not someone who will send old magazines? The older children can cut the pictures after the mother has read them. You will recall they are the family quarantined with scarlet fever.

R. A. M.

Thanks Givers

Editor Helping Hand:

I wish to thank you for the help I received through you. Also I wish to thank Mrs. R. M. H., of Medford, for the carriage, and Mrs. C. E. M. for the box of clothes and the crib, which she said was on the way. I have written personal letters to them, but wish to thank them through the paper. I don't know how I can ever repay their kindness to me.

MRS. P. S. T.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON KEEPING COOL

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE New York commission on ventilation has hit upon a very happy mean in recommending a temperature not exceeding 68 degrees as the most healthful and invigorating for inhabited rooms. There are many cases in which even a few degrees lower than that would be an improvement. The great difficulty is in adjusting the inside to the outside temperature in the widely divergent seasons. Possibly this is easier in Winter than in Summer, because in cold weather one can meet the outside conditions by putting on extra clothing, while in hot weather garments for indoor and outdoor wear are of about equal weight.

You can protect your body against loss of its own heat far more easily than you can guard it against excess of heat coming from without.

White clothing forms a shield against external heat. Mark Twain's idea of wearing only white both Summer and Winter was wrong, except from the viewpoint of personal picturesqueness and distinction. During Summer the great humorist, with his pure white suit, was arrayed in shining armor against the javelins of the sun; but when he persisted in wearing all white in Winter he shielded off heat in which the bodily furnace might have found a welcome auxiliary.

As the hot season approaches it is well to take thought in advance about the best means of keeping as cool and comfortable as possible. It is a great pity that fashion is allowed to have any control whatever over such a matter. Years ago it was quite a general custom for men as well as women to carry white or gray sunshades or "sun umbrellas," in July and August.

Unquestionably it was a good thing to do. But of late a man carrying a sunshade excites grins and gibes among the unthinking and submissive subjects of fashion and convention, who are the great majority. The carrying of umbrellas in the hottest months ought to become a settled custom. So, too, the wearing of white or light-gray hats, and of white or light-colored clothes.

The problem of temperature adjustment in Summer, as in Winter, presents itself in two aspects—one indoor, the other outdoor. In both cases clothing plays a similar role. The general object of Summer clothing is to prevent the accumulation of heat and to facilitate evaporation of moisture from the skin, for evaporation produces coolness. At all times the clothing must furnish protection against sudden changes and drafts.

"Rheumatisms" are a frequent result of sudden cooling caused by too rapid evaporation of perspiration in a cool, drafty place. People have unconsciously invited lifelong illness and even death by incautiously exposing themselves in this way. A cool draft blowing on the back of the neck is especially perilous. Sleeping in a draft is often dangerous. Even birds and wild animals, better protected by nature than we are, avoid that peril.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

WHAT ELIZABETH STANTON DID

By Mark Stuyvesant

When a high-spirited young girl named Elizabeth Cady discovered that she could not attend the college where her brother was receiving his education, or any other college, she was indignant.

In all probability this was the first impetus which started this brilliant woman on her lifelong crusade for freedom for women.

But again, she was impressed by the utter disregard for the natural rights of women expressed by the law when she visited her father's law office in Johnston, New York, and read some of the unjust statutes which hampered women in every possible way from advancing and bettering themselves as citizens either individually or collectively.

So seriously did she consider the drawbacks which marriage presented to women that when she fell in love with a distinguished antislavery orator, Henry B. Stanton, she hesitated to marry him because she realized that Blackstone's theory, "a man and wife are one and the man is the one," held true.

However, she did marry Mr. Stanton, and although she was what was called in derision by most people "an advanced woman," she proved that she possessed every quality for a splendid wife and mother.

To the Stantons were born seven children, but Mrs. Stanton's numerous duties did not prevent her from being one of the first and most earnest crusaders for the emancipation of women.

Here Lucretia Mott and Mrs. Stanton were the two flaming torches which were to blaze the trail through the tangled wilderness in which most thinking women were then wandering.

If she could but see complete today the great work which she was one of the first to undertake!

The convention was ridiculed in every paper. Most people thought that this grave group of women were "not quite normal."

Interested also in this new movement was Susan B. Anthony, who was working in her home State, Illinois. During the development of the crusade for freedom for women Mrs. Stanton became acquainted with Susan B. Anthony... From this meeting a remarkable and very beautiful friendship started and endured without interruption for 50 years.

Together these two great friends worked and planned. Together they wrote and published "The History of Woman Suffrage," in America, defraying the expenses of publishing by earning money on the lecture platform.

In 1902 Elizabeth Cady Stanton died at the age of 87.

BUTTER MADE FROM FISH

By Temple Manning

EACH year, in March, the rivers of British Columbia, Canada, hold a special interest for the Indians who live in that part of the world.

It is then that the traveler will see the Indians patrolling the river banks alert with expectancy and on the continual lookout for something very precious to them.

They are preparing to make and store their butter for the year. And it is the rivers which yield them the wherewithal from which their butter is made.

Like the salmon, they have come from somewhere in the Pacific. They only remain in the rivers for about three weeks, but during that time the Indians fish for them night and day.

The fish are thrown into huge vats of boiling water. These vats are not heated in the usual way by building a fire under them. But the water is boiled by large hot stones which are thrown into the vats.

Although this process is quite an undertaking, the Indians consider it a far better way than that of boiling the water by a fire beneath the vats.

To the Indians this fat is invaluable. Because when it is tried out, it is made into what they call "butter."

This fish butter is used among the Indians not only as a staple article of diet, but as their chief delicacy. Although the traveler may not relish it, the Indians insist that it is far better than "white man's butter."
